Sweet Home Has Sunshine
SWEET HOME, Ore.—The incessant rains turned to snow when quite a heavy fall was registered in Greenville. At Sweet Home there was a heavy frost. The people are not surprised in this vicinity over snow coming now, as they are in warm sunshine. However, the frost scared the frogs and stopped their songs. Doubts were expressed that the correspondent really heard the frogs the past two weeks but sure enough they did sing good and hard. Of course the people who sat around a radio could not expect to hear them. The correspondent happens to be living where buttercups, bluebells, dandelions and grain are to be obtained for proof and also would be able to locate the frogs if anyone wants to catch them.

"Never Say Die" Is Latest MacLean Photoplay.

MacLean pictures are born not made. This was the slogan of Raymond Cannon in writing the scenario for Douglas MacLean's great laughing success, "Never Say Die," at Sherry's.

In adapting this latest MacLean vehicle from the famous Broadway triumph in which White Collier played the leading role, Mr. Cannon made no attempt to write a complete scenario prior to the start on actual production. The working scenario was roughly drawn and the situations developed as each scene was being shot.

"This meant that the incidents in the story happened naturally," states Mr. Cannon. "Comedy situations suggested themselves as we went along and things happened just as they do in real life—spontaneously. The picture was born—it sprang into being with comedy which was natural and therefore really funny."

"There are no forced laughs in 'Never Say Die' because no situation is mechanical. In my opinion, a laugh which is spontaneous is worth five hackneyed ones. Mr. MacLean and his supporting cast threw themselves into the characterizations and tried to 'feel their parts' sometimes they did things which were not prescribed in the original scenario and these actions were usually more ludicrous than if they had been planned in advance."

Also showing, "The Madman's Bath," Indian frontier story.

"Abraham Lincoln" Opens at Arcade Today.

The opening of "Abraham Lincoln" at the Arcade recalls that the martyr president was a believer in dreams and it is of record that he was subject to two dreams equally remarkable.

After he went to the White House, Mr. Lincoln dreamed one night that he was on a big ship sailing away in strange waters, he knew not whence or whether. The next morning good news came from the army. Many times thereafter President Lincoln had the same dream and it was always followed by good news.

Toward the close of the war the dream that upset both Mrs. Lincoln and himself for several days (one night he seemed to be aroused from his sleep by the voices of many people in mourning and lamentation. The voices came from all sides as a choir invisible of woe, and he went out to inquire the cause. He descended the stairs to the east room and there in the middle of it, stood a black cat.

Councilman Ousted by Six Vets.

MARSHFIELD, Ore.—Walter Panter of Bandon, whose reelection here is elected by wards, loses his place on the deliberative body after serving one month.

Walter Panter's eligibility was questioned and it was held he was not a resident of the ward from which he was serving.

The controversy resulted in an order for city Engineer Hudson to establish the councilman's boundary of the district in question and the findings showed Mr. Panter to be six feet outside the disputed ward.

Director Says Most People Are "At Home" In Poolrooms.

Believe it or not, but the average person is more at home in a pool room or gambling house than in church!

J. Gordon Edwards, veteran director of Fox pictures, is the authority for this interesting observation. During his years with the Fox company Mr. Edwards has directed every kind of picture under the sun and he claims that the easiest scene of all to direct is that of a gambling house or pool room in full swing, while that of a church service is the hardest. It was just recently, while directing a big gambling house and pool room scene for his latest William Fox picture, "It Is the Law," which comes to the Star theater today, that Mr. Edwards voiced this seemingly odd, but still very logical opinion—if you let him explain it.

"Of all the hundreds of scenes in all the pictures I have ever directed, those where men are shown playing pool or men and women gambling at cards, roulette and other forms of gambling are the easiest to handle," Mr. Edwards said. "The reason for this to my mind," he continued, "is that all forms of gambling have such a strong fascination for everybody that even
