H. N. GAMBLE TRIAL IS ON HERE TODAY
 circumstances but will maintain throughout the trial that Gamble had no part in the murder and is entirely ignorant of how it took place.
 The state through its attorneys, Carl Helm and F. E. Ivanhoe will of course attempt to convict Gamble on circumstantial evidence. Helm and Ivanhoe will attempt to prove that the bullet which passed through Wigglesworth's body was fired from Gamble's military rifle and so on through the long chain of circumstances bearing on the murder.
 William Wigglesworth, a well known Union citizen was murdered at his home Sunday evening, November 16. He was shot just as he opened the door of his home evidently in answer to a knock.
 The bullet passed through the door and entered Wigglesworth's body and lodged in the wall on the opposite side of the room.
 At the time of Gamble's arrest he admitted drinking and playing cards with Mr. Wigglesworth until 7 o'clock on the evening of the murder. A Springfield army rifle was found in Gamble's home with four cartridges of a five-cartridge clip in the gun and the weapon itself showing signs of being fired. Gamble stated at the time that the fifth cartridge had been used to kill a cat.
Gamble Charged With Crime.
 At the coroner's inquest the verdict was merely that William Wigglesworth "met his death from a gunshot wound" but although the blame was not fixed a warrant was sworn out charging Gamble with the crime.
 The court is already crowded with spectators and more are constantly arriving. Being the walls and occupying nearly every available space in the court room.
 Gamble, 63 years old, white haired and apparently in poor health sits between Hallock and Nichols, his attorneys. As the examination of the jurors goes on his face is expressionless and although it is evident that he is paying close attention to the procedure he gives no indication of it.
 Mrs. Wigglesworth, wife of the murdered man, sits to the right of F. S. Ivanhoe, grizzled veteran of years of legal controversy. Carl Helm, district attorney, is on the left and has so far done most of the challenging of jurors for the prosecution while Nichols has done the greater part of the talking for the defense.

Curtailment Effects Felt
 PORTLAND, Ore. (Special)—Widespread curtailment in fir sawmills and the consequent falling off in the demand for logs was reflected last week in the tendency of logging operators to slow production, according to reports from 41 employment service offices in various northwestern cities received at 41 headquarters here today. Some fir camps were closed down entirely, the reports show, while at others one or two sides were shut down. More than 300 loggers have been laid off temporarily.
 On the other hand, an improvement in the employment situation of the Inland Empire districts, where lumber manufacture is again becoming active and woods work is getting started, is indicated. Condensed reports from 41 offices are as follows:
Portland.
 The demand for loggers, heavy during the past three weeks, has materially diminished. Two lumber rivers have closed one side each and no new camps in this district have been opened. Most sawmills in Portland are continuing the five-day week. The Owen-Oregon Lumber company at Medford, which had recently started a second shift, has laid off its night crew. It is reported, and is now cutting five days a week at one shift capacity. The local employment situation is not so good as it was one week ago.
Aberdeen.
 Due to an oversupply of logs in Gray's Harbor waters, it is said, camp 2 of the Sigmaw "Truher" company has been closed indefinitely, and it is rumored here that other logging companies may curtail production for the same reason. Labor turnover in the camps has been small and there is no demand for loggers. Nine sawmills here have adopted the five-day week. There are no calls for mill workers. The number of unemployed remains practically unchanged from last week.
Tacoma.
 Because of curtailed production at the sawmills here, the St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber company has closed two of its logging camps, affecting 500 loggers. Further general curtailment of lumber production at other Tacoma mills has made it necessary to stop up logging and many companies are contemplating brief shutdowns. Nearly all local sawmills operated five days last week. The St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber company has laid off its night shift and will run six days a week.
Seattle.
 There was no new demand for labor of any kind from Puget Sound districts last week. Several logging operators are considering brief shutdowns, or until conditions materially improve. Nearly all Seattle sawmills are continuing the five-day week cutting program. Employment men of this city generally agree that the immediate situation is as acute as it has been at any time during the past three years.
Spokane.
 The employment situation in the Inland Empire is looking brighter than it has for many months. High water is moving logs down the rivers and drives will start soon. Preparations for logging have been started in many districts. Several small sawmills began operating last week. Planting mills, however, generally are running at about one-half capacity due to present lack of orders.
Mansfield Port Traffic Grows
 MARGHELLES (AP)—Freight and passenger traffic at the port of Mansfield in 1924 exceeded previous figures for the first time since the armistice. The total tonnage was 23,144,251, or 43,521 tons more than in 1913.
 Passengers entering and leaving the port numbered 771,909, as compared with 666,168 in 1913.

BODY WILL BE INVESTIGATED

 reached three and five days when reached yesterday. "Everything has been done that could be done and man's ingenuity and modern machinery have failed. No more lives should be sacrificed in any further attempts to remove the body," said Collins' father.
 Hazlett identified Collins through a gold front tooth. Seven friends of Collins crawled down the tunnel to identify him as members of a coroner's jury, including Magistrate Turner, acting coroner. Turner said he recognized Collins and felt confident that there was no way to remove the body without grave risks.
 H. T. Carmichael announced he had ordered cement be used in sealing the entrance to the tomb in the lateral of the shaft.
 Thanks Carmichael, the body was taken to the morgue. Fully thanked T. H. Carmichael, rescue director. "Mr. Carmichael, I want to get your picture and keep it with me always. May the good Lord bless you and your brave men," said the aged man.
FRANKFORT, Ky. (By the Associated Press)—Immediate and thorough investigation by three or more disinterested doctors of Collins' body has been ordered by the state. Governor Fields announced today.
 (By the Associated Press)
 Mother Earth, after clinging grimly to life and in death by Floyd Collins for more than 17 days, finally surrendered Monday afternoon and, without warning, opened a tiny hole between the rescue shaft and the natural tomb of the cave explorer.
 Peering down this tiny fissure into Sand Cave, the workers who had waged an unequal combat with the natural forces of the earth, saw that what they had fought so hard for had been lost. Collins was dead.
 "Thank God they've found him," was Lew Collins' single statement.
 Although the quest for Collins had ended in locating the body, the three miners, saddened by the realization that the man they tried so hard to save was dead, then turned, heavy-hearted, to the still dangerous task of recovery of his body. Hours of digging remained ahead of them.
 Collins' body will be consigned to a grave in the cave after funeral services under the high dome of Crystal Cave, which itself stands as a monument to the man.
 Floyd Collins was trapped in Sand Cave at 10 o'clock Friday morning, January 30, by the fall of a boulder on his foot. Some time Wednesday night, February 4, he was freed the last time.
 Neighbors and his brothers, when his plight was discovered, at once began efforts to dig him out.

 putes were submitted to the council for mediation, as provided by the Covenant. The status of the Mosul territory, long in dispute between the principal allied powers and Lithuania, and the Jawerzyna boundary dispute between Czechoslovakia and Poland were both settled in March.
 The question of the frontier between Mosul, Iraq and Turkey, came before the council, which sent a special commission of three members to investigate on the spot. As frontier incidents had taken place, the council laid down a provisional boundary between the territories occupied or administered by the British and Turkish governments.
 The question of the Greeks of Constantinople also was brought before the council in virtue of the Treaty of Lausanne. The permanent court of international justice has been requested to give an advisory opinion on this question.
 Finally, the council intervened with the conference of ambassadors with a view to obtaining a prompt settlement of the Albanian frontier question.

pute between Greece and Bulgaria, and the question of St. Naoum, involving the frontier between Serbia and Bulgaria.
 Important progress was made in the domain of international law, a committee of experts representing the principal legal systems of the world, being constituted for the purpose of drawing up a provisional list of the subjects of international law, the regulation of which by international agreement would seem desirable and realizable at the present moment.
 A series of questions relating to the protection of minorities was dealt with by the league during the year. On the basis of an agreement with the Polish government, the council succeeded in settling the question of the German settlers in Poland.
 As a result of the coming into force of the treaty of Lausanne and of the treaty of Sevres concerning the protection of minorities, the provisions contained in these treaties with regard to the protection of minorities were placed under the guarantee of the League of Nations. Consequently the questions of the Moslems of Albanian origin in Greece; Greek minorities in Bulgaria, and Bulgarian minorities in Greece were dealt with.
 The economic and financial organization of the league framed a schedule for the financial reconstruction of Hungary; and continued the financial reconstruction of Austria. Also it drew up a program for more effective protection against unfair competition, and provided for the protection of consumers against worthless goods.
 During the 1924 organization for communications and transit was called upon to act as an organ of conciliation in the settlement of inter-state disputes in connection with the application of articles of the peace treaties concerning the jurisdiction of the Oder and the European Danube commissions.
 The health organization, in the course of the year, prepared drafts for international convention on various urgent questions. It included anti-malarial research work, placed technical advisers at the disposal of the Albanian, Greek and Persian governments and authorized the league epidemic commission to pursue its investigation into outbreaks of plague, typhus and cholera.
 The committee on intellectual cooperation developed its system of national committees, serving as intermediaries between the international committee and intellectual workers in the various countries.
 This committee dealt with the question of the equivalent value of diplomas and the coordination of the courses in different universities. It also endeavored to promote the exchange of professors and students.
Opium Conferences.
 Two international opium conferences met in Geneva in November and were still in session at the end of the year. One dealing with prepared opium, the other with manufactured narcotics. A delegation from the United States took part in the work of the second conference.
 In the course of the year the council furthermore took various measures with a view to facilitating the work of the advisory committee on traffic in women and children, which has been reconstituted as the committee on traffic in women and protection of children.

 A committee of experts began an investigation on the subject of slavery. It drew up its plan of work and classified the various forms of slavery known at the present day.
 Finally, the membership of the league was increased to 55 states by the entry of the Dominican Republic. During the year, also, the German government addressed a note to the league as to its membership. The United States took part in a number of conferences and commissions, while the Soviet Republic was represented on the health committee and in connection with naval disarmament.

REV. NELSON KNIGHT
 The revival is in full swing at the new Church of God chapel on the corner of N. and Spruce. We are having a good attendance. Rev. Knight said that a report went out where a cigarette would be in the mouth of every boy and girl by 1926. Our slogan, he said, should be a cigarette out of the mouth of every boy and girl by 1926. How many mothers can say "A-men" to a slogan of this kind?
