Mitchell May Lose Post— WASHINGTON (AP)—The aircraft controversy took an unexpected twist Wednesday when a report was received by some members of the house aircraft committee that Brigadier General Mitchell, assistant army air chief and central figure in the row, would be called to the White House Thursday and informed by President Coolidge that he would not be reappointed.

White House officials refused either to deny or to confirm the report. War department officials said they had no knowledge of the matter and an inquiry at General Mitchell's office brought the statement, the assistant air chief knew nothing of it.

The report, as it reached committee members, was that General Mitchell would be given the choice of either voluntarily resigning his position or of accepting other service to which the war department might assign him upon the expiration of his term of office next month.

These committee members also said they had been informed the contemplated presidential action was impelled by declarations by Secretaries Weeks and Wilbur that they would resign unless summary action was taken in General Mitchell's case.

Both secretaries, when notified of this aspect of the report, denied that any such thoughts were in their minds and Mr. Weeks went further to call attention to his recent statement that the war department would take no action in reference to General Mitchell until the house committee concludes its investigation.

The report that General Mitchell was to be reappointed arrived at the capitol while the committee was considering in executive session the advisability of open hearings on the recent findings of certain airplane tests it had ordered conducted at McCook field, near Dayton, Ohio.

The startling nature of the Mitchell report caused an immediate adjournment of the session without decisions on the question before the committee.

ternoon session yesterday. Mr. May maintains a laboratory in Seattle for conducting examinations of the physical evidence of crimes.

The Winchester .30 calibre rifle with which Gambie is alleged by the prosecution to have done the shooting together with the bullet found in the wall, a section of the door of the Wiglesworth, home through which the shot passed and the wood panel in which the lead finally lodged were all examined by Mr. May in his Seattle laboratories.

Jacket Will Leave Bullet

The state is attempting to prove by means of May's expert testimony that the shot which killed Wiglesworth was from the Gamble Winchester rifle. Mr. May brought with him the results of a number of tests he had conducted under similar conditions to those in which the fatal shot was fired.

He also told the court that he had found traces of copper on the hole in the panel taken from the Wiglesworth door.

He explained in detail the results of nine test shots made through cedar boards of the same thickness as the section of the door through which the shot which killed Wiglesworth passed.

One principal object of May's testimony was to prove that the copper jacket of bullets of the type in the Winchester .30 calibre will separate from the lead when fired under the conditions in which the murder occurred. The results of his nine test shots varied widely.

In the majority of instances the jacket left the bullet but in several cases the jacket was still with the lead after the bullet had penetrated the wood. Mr. May was still on the stand and was being cross examined by the attorneys for the defense when court adjourned last evening.

Proceeding Mr. May, Hal Bohm, county coroner at the time the shooting occurred described the post mortem examination of the body in which the physicians attempted to locate some traces of the jacket of the bullet and were unsuccessful.

Carl Helm, district attorney, H. A. Kinghamer, deputy sheriff, Elmer Hallock, one of the attorneys for the defense, and Mrs. Gabel, daughter of Wiglesworth, all testified during the afternoon session of court. Their testimony was principally devoted to identifying the rifle, the bullet and the pieces of the door and the wainscoting used as evidence by the state. They also explained the details of the shipment of the evidence to Luke S. May for expert examination.

The report of the officer in charge of the tests said:

"A ship in commission would have had no trouble in making port under her own steam after the five explosions."

With respect to the effectiveness of the torpedo explosions the special board gave it as the opinion of the test board members "that a ship like the Washington would survive eight torpedo hits distributed about the upper water body, but could not withstand them if the hits were 'bunched' which would be 'hardly within the bounds of possibility.'"
