of from two to five or six wolves after them. But evidently the deer outran them for they, too, are well carried by the hard snow. The creek is nearly frozen with ice from the rocks down. All the side hills from Thompson's old place down are bare. Green buffalo grass is growing and the bunch grass is plenty everywhere. Water is making its appearance around the little springs as far up as the Hunter's place near the Forks. Phocas are coming down to the freshly uncovered spots for grass and spring water. Magpies that the cold weather had shored down in the bottom lands are receding back into their old haunts in the hills. Blue Jays are more numerous looking for the winter scraps around the outhouses. The hood owl has quit hooting and is busy chasing rabbits. Horses and cattle are shedding their winter's coat and are seeking up for the warmer weather. This groundhog is estimated of himself for his false prediction, so he is hid for six weeks. Contrary to the pessimists the winter has its neck broken.

SKELETON OF MAN FOUND

BEHNS, Ore.—A gold watch was the only clue in the identity of the man whose skeleton was found near the city limits of Behns on Ashby butte, Saturday. An inquest is expected to be held. The skeleton, found by boys playing on the butte, was that of an old man, believed to be Peter View, a carpenter, who disappeared from Behns about four years ago. A logger, Paul Street, also has been missing for about four years. Only tattered pieces of clothing were found. A clothbook found near by gave no identification. No indication of foul play was found.
