INDIANS WILL MEET IN MAY

PONCA CITY, Okla., (AP)—A national convention of Indians, who will come from every state having Indian population and from Mexico and Canada, will be held here May 18-24 under the auspices of the Oklahoma Society of Indians, of which Silverater J. Soldani of Ponca City, himself an Osage Indian, is president.

Forty-six different tribes will be represented. It is planned to make the "powwow" the largest gold since tribal relations were severed.

The society of Oklahoma Indians, organized last year, had its first convention at Tulsa. Six thousand Indians were visitors.

A tract of about 80 acres near the city will be obtained for the Indians camp that is to be pitched. Large circus tents have been engaged to house the many attendants that are to be present. The chief question will be partly solved by the majority of the Indians living in their own tepees.

Experts Fail To Find Cause for Earthquake

Tremors Revive Prediction of Light Temblor to Precede Major New York Disaster.

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists labored Sunday to determine the cause and the center of the internal disturbance which caused the earth to roll and toss in its bed Saturday night.

Seismographs at Fordham and Harvard universities were literally "on top" the wave and it was impossible to determine the center. An appeal was made to Oxford observatory in London. Scientists there said the quake had been registered so imperfectly that sufficient evidence for a statement did not exist. A Canadian observatory placed the center at the mouth of the Saginaw river in Michigan.

M. B. Hill, in charge of seismographs at the museum of natural history in New York, stated the tremors were caused by the slipping of a rock mass along the line known as Logan's fault to which the last earthquake experience here in 1914 was attributed.

Revive Todd's Prediction.

A recent published opinion of Dr. David Todd that an earthquake was inevitable in New York because increased weight was constantly being placed upon a "fault" which lies in the bedrock directly beneath the city, was recalled. The fact that the tide Saturday reached its lowest point was considered as having possible connection with the tremor. Efforts to connect the quake with the recent total eclipse were scoffed at by scientists who said that danger of an earthquake was least during a total eclipse.

The debated question as to whether the skyscrapers of New York will ever be tumbled down upon the heads of its millions of inhabitants was renewed by the tremors Saturday night. Opponents of the idea claim that the solid bedrock upon which the city is built, constitutes an effective safety device.

Others hold to Doctor Todd's fear of the final cavein of the "fault" within the rocks. They point out that the yawn and the shudders of the earth Saturday night fulfilled Doctor Todd's recent prediction that a major disaster here would be preceded by "a gentle quivering coming from nowhere."

British Army Raises Bars Against Unfit Recruits

LONDON (AP) — Of every 100 young men who applied to join the British army during 1924, about 52 were rejected as physically unfit, it was announced recently by recruiting officers. This compares with 33 per cent in 1912 and 38 per cent in 1922.

MUDDY CREEK BEATS POWDER

BAKER, Ore. (Special) — The fight of the Muddy Creek basketeers carried them to a 15 to 11 victory over North Powder after trailing 5 to 0 at the end of the first quarter, thereby winning the right to represent Baker county with the Baker high team at the Eastern Oregon basketball tournament at Union this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The thought of being able to represent their county at the Union tourney seemed to spur the two teams on. Many times the Powder River boys would roll the sphere around the rim of the basket while something seemed to keep it from falling through. At the end of half the score stood, Muddy Creek 2, North Powder 10 and when the third period was called Muddy had added two counters while holding King's boys from the river scareless. The last quarter proved the thriller, both teams trying desperately, one to even the count and the other to pile up an insurpassable lead. Spence made a field goal and Hornbeck converted a foul giving Muddy a 5 point lead. Just as the gun announced the end of the game a foul was called on the Muddy Creek boys and Craig added a point with a free throw, but the Powder boys were still short of victory by five markers.

PRESIDENT READY FOR CEREMONIES

the ceremonies of inauguration. He was one of the occupants who "renewed his lease." Every school boy knows how it was burned by the British troops in 1814 and almost every visitor to Washington has had pointed out to him the house across La Fayette park to which Dolly Madison fled with the table silver. Closer students of American history know that Washington himself selected the site and that the residence of the president and the seat of government came to be located where they are as a compromise between Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson on the question of how the assumption of the revolutionary debt of the colonies was to be carried out by the federal government.

The president's home, like all stately residences of its time is was painted white, and in time it became The White House. It is kept white by being given a biennial coat of paint and an annual bath with a fire hose. Although the main structure is practically the same as it was reconstructed after the fire of 1814, the White House of President Coolidge is a more extensive establishment than the White House of Thomas Jefferson or even of William McKinley. The executive offices which comprise the west wing were added during the administration of President Taft, as were the passages to the east which balance the architecture and comprise substantially the east wing. All the presidents, up to and including Taft, did their work in the White House study in the same room where Lincoln bore the trials and tribulations of a civil war.

A "Striking Reminder."

But in the inaugural ceremonies of tomorrow there will be a striking reminder of the old White House as it was in the day of the first presidents. It will be the simplicity and the economy and the lack of display with which President Coolidge has insisted against all argument, that like the material should be conformed. Obviously it will not be as simple as in the early years of the republic when Washington was only a village. But it will be as simple, if not more simple, than President Harding's inauguration of four years ago.

President Harding insisted on cutting down the size of the inaugural procession and completely the ceremonies generally, but President Coolidge went even further. He refused his consent for a lack of display to such an extent that the local citizens committee which had planning to raise $100,000 for light, reviewing stands, a court of honor in front of the White House, a display of fireworks at night and numerous other features for an old time inaugural celebration, gave up the task and announced it would spend only about $750, which would go for badges for firefighters participating in the ceremonies.

The West Point cadets and the Annapolis midshipmen will add to pomp in tomorrow's pageantry because the president feels there is no warrant for spending the government's money to bring them to Washington. Such pretty troops and militia as can be brought to mingle will march and it is understood that the procession will take less than an hour to pass a given point.

The ceremonies will be simplified further by the fact that there is no outgoing president to participate in them. So far as President Coolidge is concerned he will be but a spectator at the ceremonies, assisting calls on his silk hat, and drive to the capitol. About 1 o'clock he steps out on the platform built at the east portico facing the Mall, and takes the oath of office. Then at the head of the inaugural procession, such as it is, he drives back to the White House, and from a small stand reviews the procession as it passes. Then he returns to his desk and goes to work.

In the evening there will be a charity ball—but not an inaugural ball. None of the organizations who would attend an inaugural ball is there were one probable will be there, including Vice President and Mrs. Dawes. President Coolidge, however, will be spending the evening quietly at home with Mrs. Coolidge, going to bed early in order that he may get up early next morning and go to work again.
