Two Overseas Veterans In Present U. S. Senate

(Continued from Page 1) in line of need we will depend upon our civilian soldiers. "We are now urging civilians to accept commissions in the reserve corps. We are urging them to accept commissions in the national guard. They are told that in time of emergency the outcome will depend upon them and their ability to lead men. "We say to them: 'When we take you into the army we will give you the same rank, the same uniform, the same pay and emoluments of office—everything that an army officer has. "But—if you go to the front and are wounded, you will not receive the retirement privilege or the compensation that will be received by the regular army officer. "We are going to hold out something on you. We are going to hold out the retirement privilege."

schedule," Bingham told his fellow senators, "if I had been disabled while flying as a major, and had lost two fingers of one hand, I would be entitled to be placed on the retired list of the army and for the rest of my life receive a salary of $2250 a year. "But if my mechanic, riding in the front seat, having only the grade of sergeant, had been similarly injured, he would receive for that same disability only $350 a year. "Some of us were more lucky than others and got higher ranks. Because of my luck in having been commissioned a major, I would have received, under the plan proposed, if disabled, seven times as much as my sergeant. "That is not justice to the service man—at least it does not seem so to me."
