OUT OF THE DUNGEON-LIKE BLACKNESS of this cave at Selous, Ceylon, in the Philippine Islands, trickles a small waterfall that is said to have marvelous health-giving properties. Its source never has been discovered.

PETER PAN CAUSED PRETTY 17-YEAR-OLD BETTY BRONSON to lose her hair. When she was chosen by Sir James M. Barrie to appear in the motion picture version of "Peter Pan," Betty had the beautiful locks shown at the left. But, alas, Peter is a boy and the gorgeous crest had to disappear. And now Betty's locks are a memory of the past—as the picture at the right shows.

IVY ALLADSYNE, late favorite of the Music Box Revue, is said to possess the most dangerous eyes in America. They landed William Wolf, University of California student, in jail recently when Ivy caused his arrest, charging that he broke into her room, after following her around for weeks.

ON A ROCK JETTING 60 FEET OUT OF THE WATER in the harbor of St. Nazaire, France, will be placed this memorial statue commemorating the first landing of American soldiers in France on June 26, 1917. The statue, designed by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, shows an American soldier astride a spread eagle, and armed with a crusader's sword.

M. MAURICE BEYGRASSE, governor general of Malawi, leading African archaeologist, will accompany a Beloit College, Beloit, Wis., expedition into northern Africa next summer in search of the cradle of pre-historic civilization.

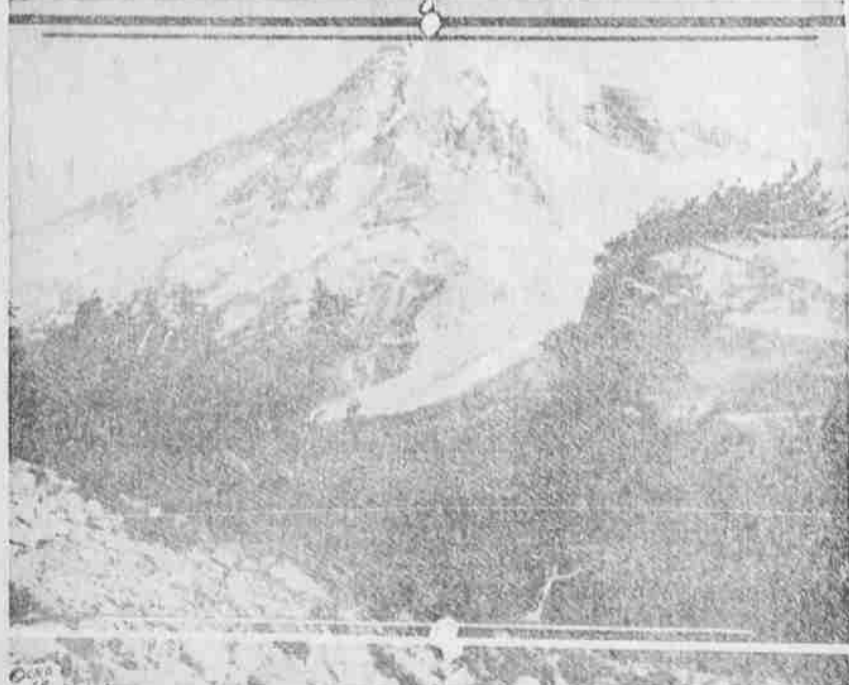

WALLACE BEERY really is not so diabolical as he seems on the screen, says his wife, formerly Miss Artha Gillman. Their secret marriage took place last August and has just been learned publicly. It is Beery's second venture into matrimony.

ISABEL DILWORTH, former Philadelphia society girl, has been the wife of Lou Tellegen, "the perfect lover," for more than a year. The secret was let out when she held up her curly-headed child, Rex, and made his presence known to a hitherto unassuming world.

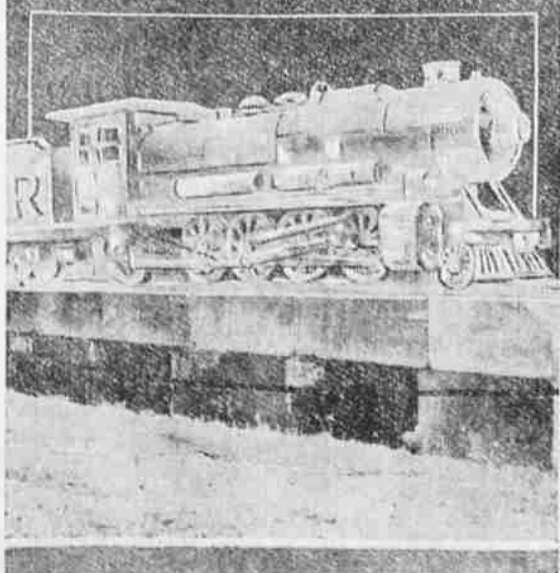

HE'S RIDING TO A FALL ALL RIGHT. A camera man caught A. Lefebvre just in the act of falling from his mount at the first open ditch in the Burston Selling Steeplechase, England.

RAINIER NATIONAL PARK is a picture-maker's paradise. Here is shown a wind-swept pine in the breeding shadow of a snow-peaked mountain that overlooks Paradise Valley and Nisqually Glacier. Winds in this vicinity sometimes attain tremendous velocity.

THEY CALL Gordon Grehn, 12, Ashland, Wis., a hero because he dived into the icy waters of Lake Superior and saved the life of his 7-year-old brother. Gordon is a Boy Scout.

ENOUGH ICE IN THIS ICE STATUARY to keep your refrigerator filled all summer. It was carved by hand by J. Carboneau and five assistants in two weeks' time. Seventy-five tons of ice were used. The locomotive and tender is on display in Quebec City.

"TOP O' THE MORNING TO YOU," says this young Irish maid as she steps out on the morning of March 17. Mary Pickford, of course, 'tis none other, and she's proud of all her Irish blood.
