Partners Turn from Cloaks and Suits To Filming "Beauts."

Fifteen years ago, Montague Glass, seated in a tiny restaurant in the heart of the cloak and suit district of New York City, jotted away a lunch hour and watched his fellow diners. Then and there two of the most famous characters of American fiction came into being—in the fertile creative mind of a young lawyer-author. He went away and worked for weeks. And then the American public and eventually the entire world was formally introduced to Messrs. Potash and Perlmutter.

These two argumentative partners, inspired by the people Glass knew and the heated debates he listened to during that noon hour many years ago, have today shared their joys and their sorrows with people of practically every nation of the globe. Every language, including the Scandinavian, has heard their business debates and laughter at the hearing, Potash and Perlmutter, through the short stories written by Mr. Glass and through five plays have gained international and everlasting fame. And yet their renown is spreading and their appeal has never lessened.

Today Potash and Perlmutter are in the movies. And not only in the movies, but of the movies as well. They are movie producers and the Glass and Perlmutter of their latest business venture is the subject of Samuel Goldwyn's production "In Hollywood," the first National picture which will be the main attraction of the Arena Theatre on Friday.

The picture is an adaptation of the play, "Business Before Pleasure," which has been transferred to the screen by Frances Marion, Alexander Carr, and George Sidney. The immortal Potash and Perlmutter and other in the cast are Betty Blythe, Vera Gordon, Belle Bennett, Anders Randolf, Peggy Shaw, David Butler and Joseph W. Girard.

Advance reports credit George Metford, popular Paramount producer, with another directorial triumph in his production of "The Top of the World," which makes its local appearance at the Star Theatre.

The photograph is based on the famous Elmer St. Dell story of the same name and deals in melodramatic fashion with the romance and adventures of a high-spirited English girl who runs away to South Africa to marry a childhood sweetheart. An indication of the extreme care that went into the making of this picture, may be seen in the array of screen talent that has been assembled for the various roles. Anna Q. Nilsson, James Kirkwood, Raymond Hatton and Sheridan Lewis have the four featured roles, while the supporting cast includes some of screen's finest character actors.

Those who have previewed the film have no hesitation in predicting that "The Top of the World" will be hailed as Metford's finest production effort to date. This is indeed high praise, when it is recalled that he has to his credit such established film successes as "The Sheik," "Down of Tomorrow," "The Light that Pathed" and "Tiger Love."

It is claimed, however, that in his latest production Metford has managed to achieve some novel effects that are revolutionary from a photographic and production standpoint.

Finest Cast Assembled In "Bread" Showing

One of the season's finest casts was assembled for "Bread," Metro-Goldwyn's screen version of the Charles Norris novel, at Sherrys, "the chief role, that of a girl who's fed between a love for business life and that of the home, is played by Mae Busch, who has lately appeared in such successes as "Nurse the Man," "The Christian," "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," and "Broken Barriers."

The leading man is Robert Pratt, and other players include Pat O'Malley, Wanda Hawley, Robert Donworth, Myrtle Stedman, Ward Crane, Raymond Lee, and Eugene Kemmer.

"Bread" was directed by Victor Serrizinger and was adapted to the screen by Albert Lewis and Lenore Coffey. It is a Louis B. Mayer production.

"Comedy showing, "The Luck of the Football."

"Even of India" is an excellent book. When it comes to beauty one might say these eyes have it.
