CULTURE OF DAHLIA TOLD

By J. W. GILL, of Gill Bros. Seed Company, PORTLAND, Ore.—The dahlia is an American production and originally grew wild in Mexico. The flowers of the wild dahlia were small and single. It was named dahlia after a Swedish botanist named Dahl.

There are seven main classes, all quite distinct in form: Cactus, pom-pom, decorative, show, pom-pom, single and ciliate. The best cut flowers are found in the decorative and pom-pom types.

Dahlia do best in a sunny location and should be planted in well drained soil containing plenty of humus. Avoid planting them close to large shrubs or trees.

Work Soil Thoroughly.
When ready for planting, work the soil thoroughly until it is loose and free from clods. It is preferable to use ground that has been cultivated the previous season, but soddy soil can be used; provided it is worked early in the spring and the grass is well rotted before planting. The soil should be taken deep and care should be taken not to prepare the ground too wet. In case of heavy clay soils, it is well to mix sand with the portion where the bulb is to be planted. In fact, place the bulb in pure sand and is quite suitable for small children.

Fresh Strawberry Pudding.
One pint strawberries, 1 cup water, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 teaspoon salt, 2-4 cup sugar, 2 eggs (whites).

Wash berries and crush slightly. Let drain. There should be one cup juice. Put juice and water into a smooth saucepan and bring to the boiling point. Dilute cornstarch in enough cold water to pour easily. Stir into boiling liquid. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly for 15 minutes. Add salt, sugar and berries. Keep hot over hot water and fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Turn into a mold dipped in cold water. Chill and serve with hot or cold custard made with the yolks of the eggs.

Wynne Ferguson Gives you these EASY LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

During the course of a discussion at one of the New York card clubs the other night, the writer made the statement that, in his opinion, an average player would lose from 500 to 1000 points in an evening's play, either by bad bidding or bad play or both. There was considerable difference of opinion so the writer suggested that a player of average skill be selected and that a record be kept of any bad bids or plays that he might make during an evening's play. In order to make the scoring easier, it was agreed that games should count 125 points and that no record be kept of rubbers. The test player was selected and three other players, of whom the writer was one, made up the rubber. It was the duty of those three to call attention to any mistake of play or bidding by the test player and if in the opinion of all three it was a loss that could have been saved by average skill, it was charged against him; but not otherwise. Play continued for about three hours and during that time, the test player made only five mistakes, two as to the play of hands and three as to the bidding but these five mistakes cost over 500 points. The mistakes as to play were unimportant, one due to failure to count trumps which cost game, a net loss of 125 points; the other to a failure to size up an opening lead as a marked singleton. The latter mistake only cost contract and a net loss of 50 points.

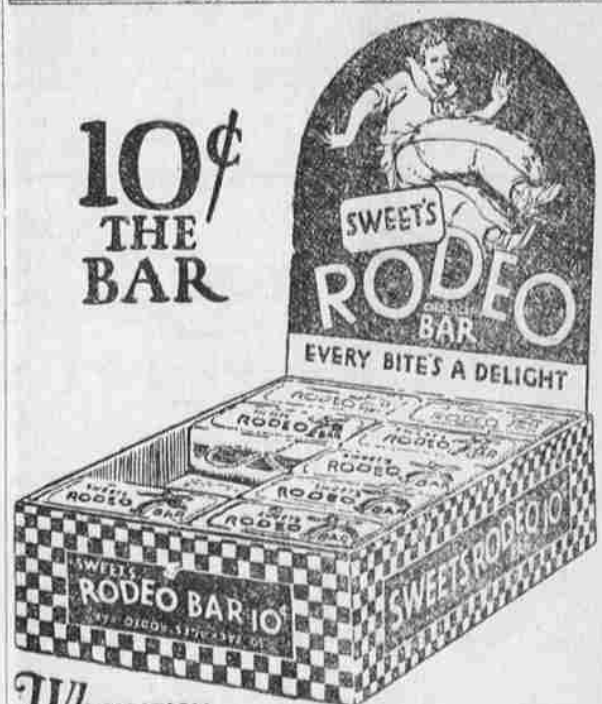

It was on the bidding, however, that the big losses occurred and as the three hands in question are normal hands and being up points in bidding that the average player should know and understand, they are given here:

Hand No. 1
Hearts—K, 9, 2
Clubs—K, J, 7
Diamonds—K, Q, 9, 8, 7, 6
Spades—8

Y: A B
Z: B

No score: Z dealt and bid one no-trump. A and Y passed and B bid two spades. Z and A passed. What should Y now do? There are two sound bids that he could have made, one of two no-trump and the other of three diamonds. The two no-trump seems the sounder bid. Y has a no-trump hand himself and must figure that Z has a steeper in the spade suit. If Y had bid two no-trump in this instance, he and his partner would have scored four no-trump. Y, however, decided to bid three diamonds. If three spades and Z and A passed. At this point Y made a great mistake. Having once decided to bid diamonds, he should have rebid at least once, but for some unknown reason from the first floor to the basement when the alarm was sounded. In ten minutes the fire was under control and in another 15 minutes was practically extinguished. The damage was approximately $500.

Klamath School Damaged.
KLAMATH FALLS, Ore.—Fire which originated in the science laboratory threatened the Klamath high school. The flames had burned through the second floor and

Many Signs Now Point Way To Paraguayan Prosperity

BURNOR ATHES (AP)—The situation of Paraguay has undergone a vast change for the better, according to Dr. Manuel Benitez, minister of finance of that country, in an interview given out while on a recent visit to Buenos Aires. From a state of economic anarchy, the balance of trade is now in the country's favor. Its currency has been stabilized at a reasonable rate of conversion and its stock of gold is increasing. Paraguay, moreover, has balanced its budget and closed the last financial year with a surplus.
