MAN TAKEN FOR BURGLAR
MARSHFIELD, Ore.—R. C. Tunham, of Marshfield, head of a chain of grocery stores along this part of the coast, was taken for a burglar at Bandon, while he was rummaging about a stock of goods in a store he had bought at a receiver's sale looking for the electric light switch. Nearby people saw him enter the store and called the police.

Tunham was taken into custody, offering no resistance, but when explanations were made, the arrest was annulled.

Corn: "What are you going to have when you get your adjusted compensation?"

Willie: "I think I'll paint my house and maybe have a sleeping porch. What are you going to have?"

Corn: "I think I'll have long grey whiskers and maybe a fit."

One of the faults we find with the parking rules is that a business man has to run down from his office every half hour, if he obeys the law, and move his car to a new parking place.

Hap—My parents had a terrible time getting married.
Sap—So? How come?
Hap—Mother wouldn't marry father when he was drunk, and father wouldn't marry mother while he was sober.

I DOUBT IT.
When a pair of red lips are returned to your own,
With no one to gossip about it,
Do you pray for endurance and leave 'em alone?
Well, maybe you do; but I doubt it.

When a shy little hand you're permitted to seize,
With a sweet nervous atomer,
Do you think you can drop it with never a squeeze?
Well, maybe you would, but I doubt it.

When a tapering waist is in reach of your arm,
With a wonderful pinching about it,
Do you argue the point that the good and the hard?
Well, maybe you do; but I doubt it.

Two things that are difficult to determine are when a pair of goldfishes are a perfect fit and when a ukulele is tuned.

Life is the world's greatest merchandiser; it sells happiness, sorrow, sunshine, clouds, contentment, dissatisfaction, love, hate, everlasting life, eternal damnation—step right up, gentlemen, select your goods, pay the price, and take them away.

Mr. Good: "My boy, why is it always hard to tell the truth?"
Boy: "Because you don't have to remember what you say."

The pessimist predicts the end of the world, while the optimist howl can it have any when it's round.

While operations come high they certainly do give a woman a lot of prestige and perhaps are worth all they cost.
