NEW YORK (AP)—Dun's today says: "No other economic event of the week has compared in interest and significance with the return to Great Britain to a gold basis. The action, which had been foreshadowed by the recent close approach of sterling exchange to parity, marks further progress toward normal conditions in international commerce and its effect on American export trade should be considerable. Sterling domestic commodity prices, however, though it has been, has not kept pace with production in numerous industries and this has forced readjustments from the high rate of manufacturing reached on the expansion which followed the national election last November. Such a phase appears in iron and steel, sugar and certain textiles, among other commodities, and for 14 consecutive weeks declines have predominated in Dun's list of wholesale quotations."

Downing Street Was Expensive Residence Declares J. R. Clynes

LEEDS, Eng. (AP)—J. R. Clynes, who was the first labor minister to reside at No. 11 Downing Street, could not care to undergo the experience again. While true it is in these quarters, next door to the residence of the premier, life there is altogether too expensive, Mr. Clynes wrote recently in the Yorkshire Evening News in an article of his experiences at No. 11, which is a member of the Ramsey MacDonald government. Mr. Clynes, now a member of parliament, points out that most of the political leaders before him at No. 11 were doubtless men of simple private means.

"There is an impression that the political tenant moves into Downing Street to the enjoyment of a free house run at public expense," says Mr. Clynes. "It is true that rent is not paid by the occupant, but he pays for nearly everything else. At No. 11 the state pays the wages of a messenger that is about all the relief which the occupant receives. The whole of the staff to run the house (usually about nine in number) are paid, fed, and supported by the occupant. On occasions of hospitality and entertainment, I had to pay all the costs and expenses of extra staff, even to the fees for attendants in the cloak room—the cloak room usually being one of the office rooms transferred for the purpose."

"I was sometimes asked, when using the telephone, whether the call was official, and periodically I received demand notes for payments amounting to several pounds sterling for telephone calls deemed of a personal or private character. "Occasionally a command came for a journey to Buckingham Palace or to some place of distinction, where officially I was required as a minister or public man. At times I would be told that in addition to the chauffeur, a second man or porter or footman was the custom, and a bill was sent to me for the payment of a few pounds for such occasions."

recital on the piano. Mrs. Hagar Richardson accompanied Miss Richardson at the piano, following perfectly the various modes of the artist and adding greatly to the value of the program.

Mark Daniels' great baritone voice was superb. It filled the church time and again, in his tender moments, dropped for low but one had to listen closely in order to hear it. But at all times the unusual tonal quality of his voice and his command of vocal technique was evident.

Several Selections. Mr. Daniels' selections included "Der Wanderer," Schubert; "World You Are So Young," Cahn; "Harlequin," Sanderson; "Someone Worth While," Ward Stevens; "Goin' Home," Dvorak; "Tally-ho," Leoni; "Trade Winds," Keel and "Song of the Flow," Monstorgsky.

The members in the first solo were for the most part pianists and at times even and. They served very effectively to show the sonnet grandness of Mr. Daniels' voice and the very appealing qualities of his tone.
