"Madame Sans Gene" Now Running at The Arcade.

Girola Swanson's new Paramount picture, "Madame Sans Gene," the story of a French laundress, who befriended Napoleon in the days of his poverty and was remembered by him in his days of prosperity and power, opens at the Arcade theater today.

It was while Napoleon was a young lieutenant of artillery that he first met Catherine Hubacher. She had a laundry in the Rue St. Anne in Paris, and there the young officer took his soiled clothes. Incidentally, it was in this street during the recent war, that the American provost-marshal had his headquarters. Many an American soldier who went "A. W. O. L." spent several nights almost next door to the spot where Napoleon had his washing done.

Catherine was pretty and outspoken. She didn't know—and if she had known, probably would not have cared—that her impetuous customer was one day to be the greatest figure in the world. Napoleon lived at the Hotel des Petites, near her shop, and he owed her, as well as other tradespeople, a long score. When he went into the laundry one day, she was about to ask him for payment, when she noticed that his shoes were worn so that his bare feet showed through. So she simply added the amount to the list and said nothing.

Napoleon, it is said, forgot the bill, but he never forgot her. She married a young sergeant, named LeFebvre, and many years later Catherine and her husband became the Duke and Duchess of Dange. The former sergeant in the line made a marshal of France, Catherine never lost her habit of plain speaking and it is history that the fattened and unpaid laundry bill was once used by her to prevent France from committing a grave diplomatic blunder.

It makes an absorbing story, this chronicle of Napoleon and Madame Desil May Care.

Charles de Roche, popular Franco-American leading man, heads the cast appearing in support of the star, Emile Brain, of the Comedie Francaise, has the role of Napoleon. The other characters are all prominent on the French stage and screen.

"Fools in the Dark" At Sherrys Today And Tomorrow.

One of the most successful comedy-dramatic pictures of an era notable for such great laugh producing films as "The Galloping Fish" and "Tillie's Punctured Romance," is Al Santell's new F. B. O. feature picture, "Fools in the Dark," at Sherrys today and tomorrow. Staged by the man who directed "Lights Out," it is but natural to expect much in the line of genuine amusement.

Matt Moore and Patsy Ruth Miller are the featured players in Mr. Santell's latest success, supported by a great cast in which Charles Belcher, Bert Grady and Tom Wilson are prominent. Mr. Moore once more proves his ability to get over comedy and not only leaves the audience laughing, but holds their sympathy. Miss Miller is her usual charming self—which is all that need be said.

The plot deals with the ambitions of one Prefect Schwartz, who is much humiliated by his father's business—the manufacture of the Schwartz Stycopian Garbage Can-and who has a desire to write scenarios for the movies. He falls in love with Ruth, the niece and ward of Dr. Rand, a monomaniac scientist who is one of the two "boogymen" in the film. In order to test the boy's courage, Dr. Rand invents a series of harrowing and terrifying experiences, which eventually culminate in Prefect's complete triumph over Dr. Rand, the trick villain, and also over Ruth, his servant, who turns out to be a real one.

Comedy showing, Harry Langdon in "The Sea Hawk."

Lois Wilson Is The Only Girl In "Contraband"

Even though Lois Wilson is the only girl in the featured cast of the Paramount picture, "Contraband," coming to the Star theater today, she leads everything her own way—not by a long shot.

Miss Wilson has the role of a young girl who inherits her uncle's run-down small-town newspaper, takes it over and, what's more, makes a "go" of it. She is featured in the production with Noah Berry, Raymond Hatton and Raymond McKee.

The story is an adaptation by Jack Cunningham of Clarence Huddington Reiland's novel, produced for the screen by Alan Crossland, who made "Enemies of Women," "Sinners in Heaven" and others.

Edwards Davis heads the cast playing in support of the principals. He has a heavy role of a crooked politician, head of a band of criss-crossers, who, heretofore, had used the Gibson Free Press as a means of furthering his schemes and he is furious when he learns that he can't handle the new "boss" of the paper as he had handled her uncle. That's why Miss Wilson's position is not so good. Davis, as Abner Fowles, is always trying to tell her how to run the press. Noah Berry is a crooked deputy-sheriff and Fowles' "yes-man."

Fortune Smiles On Artist Who Told Humble Path

LONDON (AP) — One of London's numerous sidewalk artists, who draw and paint in the streets to attract attention from the pockets of pedestrians, has risen to fame and had his works exhibited at the Redfern Gallery, in Old Bond Street.

He is G. Bessli, a miner, who saw service in France. After the war, being out of employment, he took up the occupation of daily drawing on the pavement, and sat with a sign that he could catch small coins. He still eventually was recognized by artists who had fared better in life, and recently he was invited to exhibit a number of his drawings.
