RADIO ON THE FARM
(By Powell Crosley, Jr.)
Radio is helping to solve a real farm problem. It helps to answer that time-honored question: "How to keep 'em down on the farm." A Montana farmer writes that for years he was troubled because of the extent of his labor turnover. The automobile which took the farmer to the city helped solve the problem. But snow and ice and bad roads in the winter time made it impossible to get to the city at times. Then radio came along and brought the city to the farm—music and interesting talks, the theatre and valuable information. Soon, labor turnover became less.

Not only has the radio taken the city to the farm but it has taken a part of the city which ordinarily might not be accessible to many farmers. It has made it possible for them to go to banquets in distant cities where distinguished men have spoken. It has made it possible for them to attend events of such national importance as the inauguration of the President of the United States. It has acquainted them with good music, the grand operas and the standard overtures, as well as with popular music which has a very definite place in American music.

Today the average farmer enjoys all of the convenience of city life together with the advantages of life in the country. He has modern illumination, modern sanitation, a motor car and a radio.

I firmly believe that radio in its service to the man on the farm is very much in its infancy. Today the farmer receives quotations from the grain and stock markets by radio. He is advised about weather conditions. He is informed about the condition of the cattle market. But there is much more that can be done.

There are three ways of helping the farmer:
1. Pay him more for the things he grows.
2. Charge him less for the things he buys.
3. Help him grow larger crops.

The third is of course the easiest. Surely there is a place for the radio to disseminate quickly information of value to the farmer.

SCOTS DESERT PORRIDGE
EDINBURGH (AP).—Ham and eggs have replaced porridge as the "popular" breakfast dish in Scotland. The decline of the use of porridge, it was brought out recently at a board of agriculture inquiry, is attributed to a change in the national diet and began 10 or 12 years ago.

Dinner — Fruit cocktail, broiled cod, spinach sauce, shoe string potatoes, buttered beets, head lettuce with Thousand Island dressing, toasted crackers with Roquefort cheese, rye bread, milk, coffee.

This dinner offers a suggestion for a company dinner. A fruit cocktail is particularly pleasing during the summer months and is easy for a hostess to prepare. Crackers and cheese take the place of a salad at the end of the dinner when serving the guests wafers and fruit.
