O. W. SHOPS TO STAY IN LA GRANDE

to the effect that "a valuable report" of the move was being circulated in that city. The article then goes on to state the advantages which would accrue to the railroad by transferring the company machine shops to Baker. Mr. Hollans' statement should effectively set at rest any further discussion on the matter.

The White Plague looms as one of the biggest post-war problems in the United States, creating conditions of distress that cannot be solved alone by government agencies regardless of the liberal laws provided for the care of the disabled defenders of the nation.

The latest available figures of the United States Veterans Bureau show that 10,828 world war service men are in hospitals for the treatment of tuberculosis. This is nearly one-half of the total, 25,415 on December 31, 1924. This total showed an increase in six months from June 7, 1924, of 5,000.

While tuberculosis is outstanding at the present time by the neuro-psychiatric cases by 652, the latter problem is not so serious, economically, although, to quote the director of the Veterans Bureau, Gen. Frank T. Hines, they require a highly specialized administration, and are perhaps the most important in the medical service. Those afflicted with chronic insanity will require custodial care in an institution the remainder of their lives, and in the majority of cases life expectancy will not be materially lessened by reason of their mental state.

With tuberculosis, there are many phases to be met. All have been carefully considered by The American Legion, and the solutions through the $5,000,000 Endowment Fund now being raised for the disabled and the care of orphans of veterans is assured.

One of the most serious problems in this connection is the care of the orphans of the veteran, who upon his return from the war, married the widow, who, when he became the father of several children, then has become stricken with the disease that first fastened its tentacles upon him, while weakened by exposure and war mis.

The Veterans Bureau estimates there are 5,000 war orphans in the United States at the present time who need some degree of care. Insurance actuaries estimate this number will be increased to more than 20,000 by 1932. Many of the children of war veterans who die of tuberculosis cannot receive government compensation. Often it is impossible to prove that the disease was contracted while in service.

The submarine painter makes his sketches on specially oiled material while working under water in a diving suit, generally at depths of about 25 feet. Here the luminosity of the water is equal to daylight above the surface. The artist says he forgets about being under water as he sketches until he is warned by a tug on his air hose. Realistic Paintings Of Weird Seascapes Made Under Water

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)—Few people here know that Zark Pritchard, the American painter of submarine life, has been leading a hermit's life in Brazil for two months, painting for exhibitions at Paris and Brussels, the former opening June 1. He has been living on Paqueta Island, in the middle of Rio's big harbor, an hour by ferry from the city. A house was rented in an unfrequented part of the island, and a chain and padlock placed on the garden gate. The island is quiet enough to satisfy his need for solitude. Although it contains a small village, there are no street cars, automobiles or telephones.

animal which is always emitting a stream of bubbles from the top of its head.
Mr. Pritchard's paintings are impressionistic studies, showing fish which often have the appearance of birds flying through the air. Living corals and sea plants of various tints appear to be trees and forests, and dead coral formations often resemble canyons and cathedrals.
Mr. Pritchard came to Brazil to prepare for the exhibitions. He has discovered that the climate here is unsurpassed for drying his paintings, which are made on calf skin to secure the peculiar effect resembling a watery atmosphere.

Owning Race Horses Brings New Thrills To English Women

NEWMARKET, Eng. (AP)—Women in England have taken greater interest in horse racing this spring than ever before. There are nearly 200 women owners of flat or straight running horses, while a great many others are extensively interested in steeplechasing, or other forms of the sport counting under national hunt rules. A hundred years ago there were but very few women race horse owners in this country, but the fact within the last 25 years has spread throughout the British Isles, and every racing center now has its quota of fair owners who take an active part in the sport.

said to be of a different nature than those in older children.
He also examined the children's tonsils at the two schools and finds that about one out of every four has defective tonsils. This is a good percentage and is said to be due to a large extent to the excellent work of Miss Marquardt, county health nurse.
Dr. McAdory will visit the Central, Greenwood and Willow grammar schools and the high school as soon as possible.

Man Knocked Over Bank
HOOD RIVER, Ore.—J. B. Hubbard, 55, trampled, dazed by lights of two automobiles as they met on the Columbia highway east of here, stepped in front of one of the cars and was knocked over a 20-foot embankment. Albert Thomas and C. M. Apperson, Portland men, brought Hubbard to the city hall here and later he was taken to the hospital, where an examination showed him to be suffering a broken shoulder blade and bruises.
