AND IF I GO AND PREPARE a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also.—John 14:2.

THE REAL COMMENCEMENT.

The seniors are graduating. From the elementary schools, from the high schools, from the colleges and universities they are being ushered forth to new fields of activity, new experiences, new problems.

Some of them are through with school, though we hope the number is rapidly decreasing. For them this is a real commencement of the battles of life. But though some are through with school, no one is through with study. Though some are through with scholastic preparation, none is through with that continual, sustained application which is the accumulative preparation of all who are fired with the ambition and zeal of which success is born.

Whatever the field of action to which the graduates now seek entrance, they will find that the price of advancement, of service and reward, is indeed the commencement of study and preparation upon an ever-increasing scale. Some there are, no doubt, who like to think that they now are "through." Indeed they are through—through with hope and through with ambition and through with advancement—unless they now commence.

TRANSITION.

The Rt. Rev. W. R. Inge, "gloomy dean" of St. Paul's cathedral, London, has verbally joined forces with that wing of the world churchmen who believe that religion and the church are now undergoing another of those periods of transition of which several are recorded in history.

Speaking before the Church Club of New York, Dean Inge said: "The world is passing through a transition in religion from authority to experience. The change is undoubtedly a serious one. While it is still going on, we must expect to find that the church is not speaking with any very certain voice, and it is not exercising all the influence which one might hope to see."

Dean Inge has repeatedly, from his desk and the English platform and pulpit, called upon the church to conform to modern conditions lest it lose that world influence it has acquired through struggling centuries. He is not dismayed by the present situation because as an authority on church history he is not blind to the inevitability of change in all things. What he asks of the church is that it take the lead and not lag behind to be reluctantly led.
