High Schools in Many States Give Bible Study

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The growth of Bible study in the public schools of the United States is on a steady and considerable growth. It was revealed recently in a report by the Rev. W. A. Squires of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education. Mr. Squires showed that 19 states now officially sanction the crediting in high schools of Bible study done either in conjunction with the school instruction or in churches. The actual increase in this phase of education, he declared, has been approximately 200 per cent since 1917. Ten other states allow Bible study credit but without state authority.

The movement, Mr. Squires said, began in North Dakota and Colorado almost simultaneously. Of the states doing Bible study in high schools eight years ago Indiana has achieved the most notable success. Mr. Squires' survey showed that 44 per cent of the Indiana high schools give credit for Bible study outside the schools and an additional 12 per cent credit the Bible classes in their curricula. Eighteen per cent of the total enrollment in the schools of that state has availed itself of the opportunity. A majority of the Indiana high school principals, too, according to Mr. Squires have endorsed the work.

and its results. In North Dakota a syllabus based on the Old and the New Testaments with state examinations has been followed. In Colorado the plan is similar except the International Graded Sunday School Lessons are employed in the tests. Credit for Bible study and attendance at Sunday schools is given in Arkansas high schools in those cases in which the teachers have been adequately prepared and the course of study officially approved.

Nothing on earth bores us so much as people with gimlet eyes.

How do you endeavor yourself to everyone else's needs, her grief when she learns the truth about her mother, and the development of her own romance is tentatively and emphatically brought out. It is a drama of the most effective kind. The kind that registers with a bang and leaves you talking for days afterward.

But if you haven't read the book don't miss the story told to you until you see the picture. Then you can appreciate the deft manner in which Deven builds up this drama and keeps your interest absorbed and a-tingle, and the performance of this all-star cast.

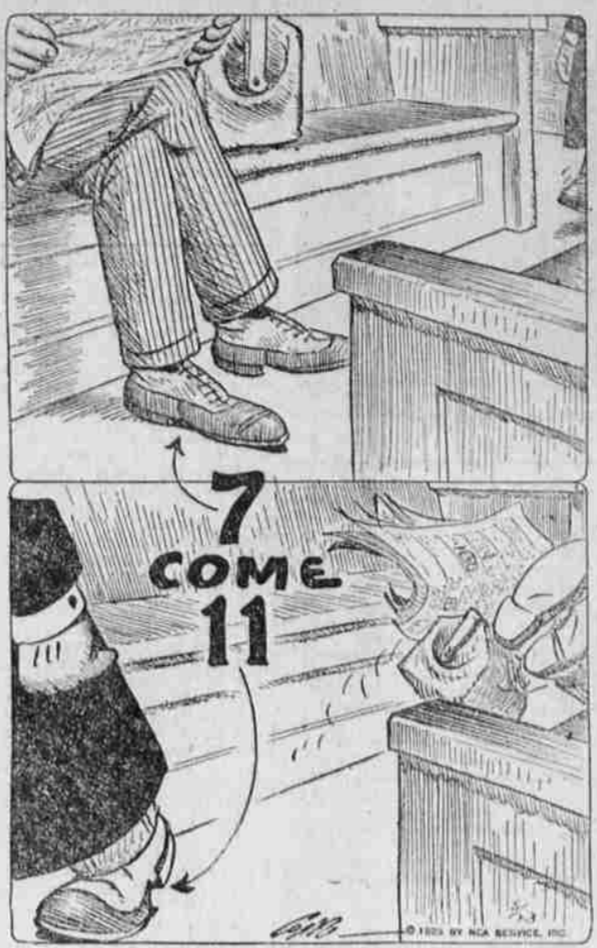

When it became known that Sol Lesser, president of Principal Picture Corporation, had obtained the screen rights to nine of Harold Bell Wright's most popular novels, that prominent producer was immediately besieged with hundreds of telegrams and letters from Harold Bell Wright enthusiastically urging him to make immediately the screen version of "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent," at Sherrys starting Sunday.

But that time, however, Lesser had so arranged the Wright production schedule that it should necessitate the first cinema work to be started on "When a Man's a Man" and "The Mine With the Iron Door," which are proving wonderful successes throughout the entire film world. This was necessary in view of the fact that Lesser and Harold Bell Wright together had decided that these pictures should be first and, accordingly, had signed up the casts for these two productions.

These messages, however, were carried out when the studio men were being made ready for production work on "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent." Wright himself is especially delighted with this novel. It is a novel in one sense of the word and yet it is a true story in the other. Wright gathered most of the material for this outstanding book while he was occupying a pulp position in the Southern Missouri hills.

Of the 55,000,000 persons, estimated to have read Wright's books, statistics prove that over 2,500,000 of that number read "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent." The cast, selected personally by

"Little French Girl" At Arcade Theater Soon.

"The Little French Girl," produced for Paramount by Herbert Brenon, who made "Peter Pan" from the best selling novel in years by Anne Douglas Sedgwick, comes to the Arcade theater for a run of two days on Monday. Alice Joyce, Neil Hamilton, Mary Brian and Esther Ralston are featured in the cast of the picture, which was adapted for the screen by John Russell, author of "Where the Pavement Ends."

Mary Brian (Wendy in "Peter Pan"), an Alice Verrier, is the little French girl, a lovely, innocent girl, who is just budding into girlish womanhood and who undergoes a truly dramatic experience for the sake of her mother and her love before she finds happiness. The story of "The Little French Girl" is familiar to many, inasmuch as the novel has already sold over 300,000 copies. It tells of Alice, who is sent to England in the hope of a suitable marriage that her mother's indiscretions have made impossible in France. How she endeavors herself to everyone else's needs, her grief when she learns the truth about her mother, and the development of her own romance is tentatively and emphatically brought out. It is a drama of the most effective kind. The kind that registers with a bang and leaves you talking for days afterward. Brian Kent Is Screen Triumph Like Great Book.

When it became known that Sol Lesser, president of Principal Picture Corporation, had obtained the screen rights to nine of Harold Bell Wright's most popular novels, that prominent producer was immediately besieged with hundreds of telegrams and letters from Harold Bell Wright enthusiastically urging him to make immediately the screen version of "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent," at Sherrys starting Sunday.

But that time, however, Lesser had so arranged the Wright production schedule that it should necessitate the first cinema work to be started on "When a Man's a Man" and "The Mine With the Iron Door," which are proving wonderful successes throughout the entire film world. This was necessary in view of the fact that Lesser and Harold Bell Wright together had decided that these pictures should be first and, accordingly, had signed up the casts for these two productions.

These messages, however, were carried out when the studio men were being made ready for production work on "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent." Wright himself is especially delighted with this novel. It is a novel in one sense of the word and yet it is a true story in the other. Wright gathered most of the material for this outstanding book while he was occupying a pulp position in the Southern Missouri hills.

Of the 55,000,000 persons, estimated to have read Wright's books, statistics prove that over 2,500,000 of that number read "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent." The cast, selected personally by

Harold Bell Wright and Sol Lesser, includes such well known names as Kenneth Harlan, Hecate Chadwick, Mary Carr, Zaida Pitts, Russell Powell, Ralph Lewis, Rosemary Theby, Russell Simpson and a host of others. This story is of a bank robber who was made great by the sacrifices of an old lady and the true love of a young woman. Brian Kent is a character whose circumstances had made a criminal. How his re-creation was effected is a work of art peculiarly original to Harold Bell Wright's brilliant and understandable pen. The story in 1920 is credited to the cinema since every detail in the film production was supervised by the author. Comedy showing, "East of the Water Plug."

Action Galore in 'Air Mail' at Sherrys.

For men and small boys who choose their moving picture fare by the number of shots fired in the course of production, "Beyond the Border," the Hunt Stromberg special, featuring Harry Carey which opened last night at the Sherry theater, has more than the expected amount of excitement to offer. To the women who go to see the romance that is perhaps lacking in their own lives, and to those who find in screen stories a supplement to their own romances, the new picture offers a love story that is overwhelming in its directness and sincerity and its refreshing individuality. Comedy that is real and different in one of the elements that excites the fancy to this fast action western which takes for its locale the stilet runned west on "Beyond the Border" where anything might happen and everything has been known to have happened. Carey is supported by a very capable cast, most important among which is pretty little Mildred Harris who is the vivacious young sister. Comedy, "Hatin' Romeo."

"Air Mail" at Star Theater Today.

All the romance—all the thrills of the U. S. government air mail service has been caught for the screen in Paramount's "The Air Mail," an Irvin Willat production which comes to the Star theater today. Warner Baxter, Billie Dove, Mary Brian and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. are featured in the leading roles of the production, written especially for the screen by Byron Morgan, author of "Code of the Sea" and others. Baxter plays the role of a clever crook who becomes an air pilot solely for the purpose of obtaining the mail. Living up to the code of the service, "No wind, no rain, no rain, no night, can stay the pilot in his flight," results in the death of one of the service's most capable men. On his death bed he asks Baxter to "carry on" and it is the beginning of the resurrection of the film.

"The Air Mail" is a thrill-filled romantic drama that should prove one of the most entertaining pictures you've seen in months. Harold Lloyd in "Merry Mix-Up On Pullman." Harold Lloyd's advice on "Pullman 'Car Etiquette'" is being published on the Arcade Theatre's screen Monday under the title of "Now or Never." It is a popular edition of Harold Lloyd's comedy, telling the laugh-creating story of a young man who tries to keep a promise he made to his childhood sweetheart, to return for her on her eighteenth birthday.
