Efficiency Bureau Is Not "Too Efficient"

"I misspoke. The efficiency bureau's mission is to keep the government employees sane and discouraged all the time. The procrastination board's is to see that corresponding positions in all the different departments are equally poorly paid."

"Say you're recommended for promotion. The efficiency bureau proves you're no good even where you are. If you're promoted nevertheless, the procrastination board delays any advance in your salary. When finally you do get it, the comptroller general decides you're not entitled to it and must pay it back. In case you refuse, he holds up your semi-monthly check."

"Recently," continued the government employe, "when Secretary of Commerce Hoover had a $6000 vacancy in his department and was asked whom he was going to put in it, he said he was still looking for the right candidate—a $29,000 man who was fool enough to take a $4000 job."

"When the government does find such a man, it doesn't get very well with him to have the efficiency bureau picking holes in the $20,000 way he does his $4000 work. The procrastination board putting the brakes on any little increase he earns and the comptroller general ordering him to return what he's already received."

"However, it suits the efficiency bureau, which really runs the whole system. If everybody were efficient, there wouldn't be any reason for such a board."

"It has to create inefficiency to provide an excuse for itself, and in co-operation with the procrastination board and the comptroller general, it does it wonderfully well."

Senator Watson's "Everybody knows prohibition isn't being enforced," wasn't a charge, such as the out-and-out wets make, but an admission which might about as well have come from the White House, since Watson virtually said he was speaking for the president.

But the hub of the senator's remarks was his announcement that a treacherous enforcement effort is about to be made, with the clause that if, after that, "the people will not stand for it, it is for them to say so and the law can be modified."

This is the first time anybody has suggested modification, in the administration making a final grand demonstration, in evidence of good faith—preparatory to telling the country, "The government's done its best and failed, so far as prohibition's concerned. Now it's up to you."

That's the meaning most of Washington reads into what the senator said.

Wheat Benefitted
A few showers were in evidence the last few days which is very beneficial for the newly planted crops. The fall wheat is looking best and growing very fast.

Louis Peck, agent for the Watkins Co., went through the Park Tuesday selling apices.

Hence Turner of Big Creek came after a load of grain from the Clarence Vanorder farm Tuesday.

Miss Maxine Duncan of Big Creek was a visitor at the Vanorder home Tuesday.

Miss Edith Turner visited with "Aunt" Maud Vanorder, Tuesday.

Mrs. Mann from the old Watts place bought little chicks from Mrs. Tom Lay Tuesday. Mrs. Mann is starting in chickens on her new place.

Mrs. Lydia Vandevanter went to Union with Mrs. Francis Kennedy.

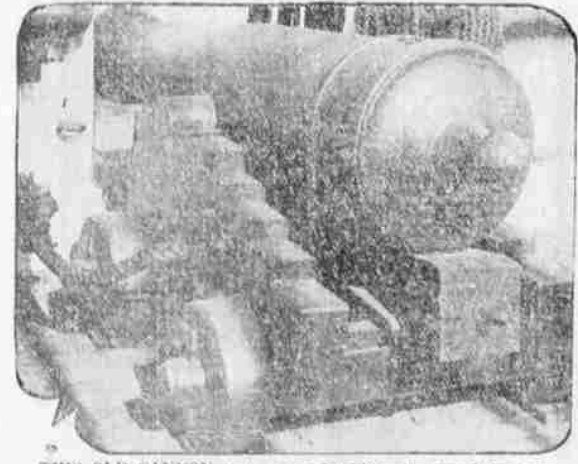

CAMERAGRAMS

LIKE MRS. COOLIDGE, MRS. HENRY FORD has a smile for all occasions. This picture of Mrs. Ford and her famous husband was snapped on the grounds of the Dearborn plant, Detroit.

NEAR QUEBEC, CAN., water tumbles over a precipice higher than Niagara, constituting Montmorency Falls, shown here. Kent House, near, was for some time the residence of the governor general of Canada, and during the final siege of Quebec in 1759 the falls protected the left wing of the French army.

THIS OLD CANNON, now covered with rust, once helped to keep the American flag on the seven seas. It is part of the armor of the U. S. Constitution, immortalized as "Old Iron Sides." The ship has been lying in the Boston navy yard for many years. An act of Congress now provides for reconsecrating of the famous ship.

Thursday, Mrs. Vandevanter will have dental work done while in the city.
Paul E. Fox, Forest Ranger and assistant Emory Sewell went back to their home in Cove Thursday.
Frank Hall was up at the ranch Wednesday. Mr. Hall is looking after the cattle seen to be turned out on the reserve.
Our McNair was doing after cattle over at high Valley Wednesday forenoon.
Joseph Lay has the writing of the cattle for the Big Creek Association to do this year. He was taking a load of soil to the mountains Thursday.
Gild Lay is cleaning up the old mine at the end of the crop planting week.
Mrs. Emory Kennedy and her two daughters from Big Creek were visitors to the Park Tuesday.
