Presentation of Women To Royalty Big Bother

Other than American women may be this way, too. I don't know. The Americans are the ones observed, as a correspondent in London, where the "presentation" fight always is on at the United States embassy whenever a "court" is ahead.

An eligible candidate for "presentation" must possess three qualifications:

1. Respectability. Most of them have that.
2. Money enough to pay for the prescribed outfit. All have that or they wouldn't be candidates.
3. An adequate "pull" to get them a "command" to attend court.

That's where they fall down. You can count on your fingers the American women with "pull" enough of their very own to get the necessary "command." They include the diplomatic group, those who have married into the English peerage, a few who have spent decades and fortunes in England building themselves up socially and two or three of the super-select here at home.

The rest must depend on the recommendation of the American ambassador in London. His recommendation invariably does the work, but every time there's a "court" he has hundreds of applications and only a dozen or twenty recommendations to dispense.

Who gets 'em?

You'd better believe that deciding that is what makes the ambassador's hair turn gray.

The applicants mostly are big people, mind, with lots of influence in the home land. It doesn't do to offer them and yet it has to be done.

After pounding the ambassador on the back until he's half dead—for he can make his limited number of "commands" go only just so far—they begin bombarding the State Department, "Favoritism!" they yell.

There were two "courts" in succession in London recently. The State Department officials are wild-eyed yet. But probably they're not a circumstance to the way Ambassador Houghton looks.

South America Starts To Build Skyscrapers

BUENOS AIRES, (AP)—The cities of the River Plate, Buenos Aires and Montevideo, are entering into an area of skyscraper competition in office building.

The edifices are not comparable in height with those of some American cities, but a building in Buenos Aires of 22 stories, including its tower, finished during the past year, and then the highest in South America, has been surpassed by a 25 story structure just completed in Montevideo. The Uruguayan building rises 338 feet, and in addition to establishing a new South American skyscraper record, is claimed to be the tallest building in the world to be built of reinforced concrete. It is a combined office building and hotel, with 240 rooms and baths. It is owned by an Italian immigrant who accumulated a fortune which had its beginning in a small hand knitting mill.

The most serious insect enemies of cereal crops, such as the Hessian fly, chinch bug, the white grub, will not be controlled in Oregon until some successful community action can be secured, say experiment station authorities. Fall plowing is the most universally beneficial practice for control of the insect pests. Planting corn on freshly broken sod is almost certain to expose the crop to the ravages of the cutworms, wireworms, and white grubs.

The Car That Put The War In Warren

JIM WARREN bought a car—the "Gingerbread Six."

Never heard of it before, but he happened to be walking along Automobile Row and during a lapse moment his foot slipped—he stepped inside.

"Nifty boat," said the salesman.

"Not had," said Jim, as paint and dou-dabs got in their hypnotic work.

"But why isn't it advertised?" asked Jim.

"Don't need to advertise a job like that," was the fore-armed reply. Sounded logical. But—

Six months later Jim had a collection of bolts and grease-cups and broken springs and disjointed steering mechanism and a motor that almost ran.

"Never again!" said Jim. "The car that's little known and never advertised hasn't much responsibility; little to live up to. But before I buy another car—or another anything—I'm going to get the facts. I'm going to read the advertisements about automobiles—or whatever I'm buying."

Advertisements are an invaluable guide to intelligent buying. Read them regularly.
