THOU SHALT LOVE THE LORD thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself.—Luke 10:27.

Cross crossings carefully applies to streets as well as railroads in this day and age.

The lawn always needs cutting when a fellow feels the urge to grab his golf sticks or fishing rod.

Hurry is killing many Americans, says a medical authority. And lack of it is killing a lot of others.

It was only a question of time, anyway, until someone would have killed Ananias for lying about his golf score.

And tomorrow you'll know whether there'll be enough water to keep your lawn green all summer and enough sewers to keep your basement dry all winter.

That editor who expressed fear that some of our modern girls are "over-cultivated" for the modern man just probably meant overdone but couldn't think of the word.

The Union Stock Show is the best advertisement for the agricultural resources of the Grande Ronde Valley that it is possible to secure. Every Union county citizen should attend the show and try to bring along as many outsiders as the old flivver will hold. No one will be disappointed.

WITHOUT HEAVY FIRST INVESTMENT.

The new tax on bus and truck companies that operate over Oregon highways has been held up by the petitions secured by these interests and the operators continue their criticism of the new law and its unfairness. This attack on the law may be just in that the proposed tax would burden the bus companies so they could not operate at a profit with present rates, but it is not for the people of Oregon to concern themselves about the profit of a private enterprise if that enterprise does not carry its share of the state tax burden.

We believe bus and truck transportation for short hauls is an important and permanent development of modern business but we cannot afford to subsidize such operations when we take all we can get (and sometimes more, as indicated by the Milwaukee road's receivership) from other transportation agencies operating within our borders. If rates are too low to allow the bus companies to pay a fair highway tax, rates should be revised; if the public refuses to pay higher rates and reverts to rail transportation for the short haul, it is unfortunate for the bus and truck operators but the only fair thing.

Oregon people who have heard the cry of distress of the bus operators with a sympathetic ear should read the recent reprint in The Oregonian from a prospectus of a Buffalo, N. Y., bus line desiring to sell its securities to the public, as follows:

> Motor transportation with fast freight service inherits all the advantages of the railroads without their heavy first investment costs. The motor transportation lines, using the highways already built, do not have to buy right of way. There are no ties, no rails to lay; no grading to do, no hills to cut down, no valleys to fill, no bridges or trestles to erect.

Nothing is more true and nothing is more convincing of the need of a state tax that will require private companies operating over our highways to pay adequately for their building and maintenance. We anticipate little support for the bus and truck companies when the people of the state consider the law at the next election.

BIG GIRLS.

I like big girls who weigh a ton
And measure six feet high or more
Who never got out on a limb
Whose backs are broader than a door.

If they can lift a thousand pounds
And muscle out a baby grand
If they can last for fifty rounds
They've got me nutted to the sand.

Ah, let meer see, the plot is thilk.
I'd like to grab one for my wife
And she could wring a nasty pick
And support me for my life.

Planes of No Use for Riff Fighting Method

France tries to give the impression that the Riff struggle is between civilization and barbarism and that the world ought to wish civilization good luck. Not necessarily.

The Riffs are in rebellion against Spain. A people in revolt against Spanish colonial misrule are entitled to the benefit of every doubt. The Riffs may be savages but it's doubtful if they'll be improved by any civilizing they're likely to get from Spain.

The French simply were outstripped by the fight. They were glad of it, too. They've been wanting to get into it for quite a while. They hope to get some territory out of it for themselves. The Spanish know it, and badly as they need help, are mighty suspicious of the kind the French are giving them.

Another thing, as the American army air service notes cynically, France has been "overstocked with general officers," ever since the war "and the Moroccan activity affords exercise for some of the surplus."

They ought to be grateful to the Riffs, instead of calling them savages. In reality, maybe they are. They're killing them, but without ill feeling, likely enough.

The prediction that China's future will be industrial, rather than agricultural, like her past, made by Dr. Chang Ting Wang, the present Pekin government's high commissioner to Russia and a recent visitor here, is something for the western world to think about.

Here's a country of 400 million inhabitants, fully half of them workers—for women as well as men do men's work in China—willing to toil 12 to 16 hours a day, seven days a week, at a daily wage below 20 American cents; a country with coal, oil and iron resources perhaps surpassing America's.

Industrially neither people nor resources have been much exploited. If they're about to be—well, it sounds like "some" competition.

Hood Raspberries Marketed.

HOOD RIVER, Dec.—J. A. Wells, who has a tract of the fruit within the city limits on Railroad street, set a record for the earliest harvest of Cuthbert red raspberries in the mid-Columbia. He marketed six pints at local stores. The fruit retailed for 15 cents a pint.

Poets' Corner

To W. S.
(By Flora L. Barrie)

You write to a Nomad, gay and free,
Restless, impatient soul,
Who feels that life is a tangled trail,
With nowhere for a goal.
Haunting the wild, untrodden lands,
An alien to every clime,
Ever and always gone astray.
To you, 'tis a life sublime.
I write to the one who loves a home,
A home for more than a day,
Of laughter and happiness, peace and love,
The nobler an quiet way.
For life with its plain, well-beloved path,
Leaves nothing for discontent,
And keeping Heaven for a goal,
Will finish a life well spent.

'TWAS EVER THUS
(By W. S.)

The scented spring was my delight
How redolent of rose her air
And to her wilderness of night
No flight of fancy could compare.

I was content, until I felt
The softness of your hand in mine;
And then I bowed my head and knelt—
To worship at a fairer shrine.

BULL BUMPS MOTORIST

THE DALLES, Ore.—Bowled by a charging bull from the front and a speeding automobile from the rear, Donald Madison, local hotelier, while motoring on the Columbia highway east of here could think of no alternative other than to stop.

He threw on the brakes, checking the speed of the automobile suddenly. With a crash the bull struck from the front, a second crash came a second later, when the machine following Madison struck from the rear. The bull, disconcerted by the solidness of the automobile, displayed no further aggressiveness. Madison, his automobile considerably damaged, was seeking to prefer charges against the owner of the bull.

Many a last year's lid covers a head full of sense.
