Co-Eds Declare Decorous Men Make Best Husbands

LOS ANGELES, (AP)—Results of a questionnaire of 595 co-eds of the University of California, southern branch, held here recently, revealed that men who are respectable without being of the "goody-good" type, and who have a decorous attitude toward life and its recognized institutions are the ideal husbands desired by modern college girls. The query was submitted by the civic education department of the institution for the purpose of ascertaining what standards are necessary for husbands.

Hotels Try Cost Plus Plan in Lieu of Tips

LONDON, (AP)—Free hand tips have been abolished in some of the larger London hotels, as an experiment, and ten percent of the "customer's gross bill added to the amount he is to pay, the ten percent being distributed among the servants generally. The ten percent addition system has been in effect in Germany for some time and appears to work to the satisfaction of the waiters, maids and others concerned because, in many instances, when a particularly generous person comes along they receive not only the ten percent but a liberal fee in addition from the individual himself.

The idea of adding a fixed ten percent to the bill is something new for London, although it was tried out some years ago in the provinces and eventually given up. The plan has become general also in Italy, Poland and some other continental countries.

In Poland, Italy and Germany as well as in the hotels here which have adopted the plan, the servants took the initiative and forced the situation, and in most instances they say they do equally as well, and often beter, than formerly.

Waiters in London who cater to the American trade say they most certainly favor the ten percent additions to the bill because most Americans pay that tax and give a liberal tip beside.

"Down with liquor" is the cry of both sides in the rum war.

La Grande Theatres

"So This Is London" Is a Henry Duffy Production.

George M. Cohan's international comedy, "So This is London," one of the stage classics of the day, will be presented at the Arcade Theatre Wednesday night, June 10th.

This is a Henry Duffy Production and that alone is considered a guarantee of its merit. The play is deliciously original in theme and its fun is of the sparkling, effervescent kind that never fails to captivate and charm an audience. There is said to be a vast amount of double-edged satire and much keen wit of the sort that one would expect from a Cohan offering.

The situations are described as laughable in the extreme and there is said to be a certain amount of freshness about the end a droll humor permeating the whole that has served to make the piece one of the most popular comedies ever presented on the American stage. The merriment continues from the first to the last curtain with never a dull period throughout.

"So This Is London" comes here after a long run in New York, Chicago and London with a capable company headed by Lawrence D'Orsay, the original star and a production in every way equal to that seen in the major cities and on a par with that originally introduced to Broadway.

Seats for this most meritorius attraction go on sale at the Glass Drug Store Friday morning. Early reservations are advised.

"Janice Meredith" Tells History Of Days of '76.

Spectacular scenes of famous episodes of the American Revolution are accurately reproduced in "Janice Meredith," Marion Davies' pretentious and beautiful Cosmopolitan production which starts a three day run Sunday at Sherrys.

The skirmish at Lexington—"the shot that was heard around the world"—the breathless moment of suspense, waiting to see whether the British would fire the first shot in the American Revolution; the dauntless Minute Men bravely fighting against frightful odds—this is one of the thrilling scenes of the production.

Washington crossing the Delaware, a living reproduction of the famous painting by Trumbull, is also a gripping chapter of the photoplay. A channel 400 feet wide had to be cut through the Saranac river in the Adirondacks to permit the crossing of specially constructed flat boats and rafts, transporting the soldiers and loaded with cannon, oxen and supply wagons.

Paul Revere's immortal ride — when his horse's hoofs resounded through the night, when startled heads appeared at windows in answer to his call, and when he took desperate jumps over fences and hedges, is full of thrills and artistic effects.

The Battle of Trenton—Washington's timely attack, and the victory is vivid and gripping, a magnificent bit out of history.

Then there's the battle and surrender of the British at Yorktown, impressive, authentic and thrilling. No time or expense was spared in remodeling the Cosmopolitan studio into an exact reproduction of Yorktown and its vicinity.

When Benjamin Franklin, in his sober garb, pleaded for aid to the colonies at the court of Louis XVI at Versailles, and the thousands of French nobility in their gorgeous brocades and satins and elaborate headdresses surrounded him — all reflected in enormous mirrored walls with sparkling chandeliers—is another historical scene.

This happened in spring training. Washington and his troops is vividly depicted, when the General shared the cold and misery endured by his soldiers at Valley Forge; while on the opposite side of the Delaware General Howe was tendered a farewell ball by his officers at Wharton Villa. Beautiful women, richly gowned and bright coated British officers danced on polished floors, lighthearted and comfortable; while the American soldiers attempted to keep warm near their camp fires — a striking contrast, wonderfully photographed.

The Boston Tea Party, a magnificent night scene; Patrick Henry's impassioned speech; and numerous other incidents of the days of the Revolution are included in this stupendous production, which, under the direction of E. Mason Hopper is a stirring page from history.

Jack Pickford Has New Type of Hero In "Waking Up Town."

Jack Pickford demonstrated in his last two pictures, "Garrison's Finish" and "The Hill Billy," that there is room on the screen for another distinct type—a whimsical, dreamy, sensitive young fellow whose timidity and diffidence keep him from being a "go-getter" until some unexpected force or circumstance gives him a shove.

In his new feature picture, "Waking Up the Town," Jack brings his characterization to its highest perfection.

"I think I have made the discovery," said Jack, "that the American public is somewhat weary of the 'I-am-the-greatest-guy-in-the-world' type of film herp that has been thrust at them for so long.

"In my last three picture, including 'Waking Up the Town' I have tried to paint a more human sort of person—the young chap who is less cocksure, who at times has his doubts about his own ability, and who doesn't sweep every obstacle before him by the sheer weight of a dominant personality. It seems to me that this sort of person is more genuine, more true to the type of our modern young American man."

That there is a sympathetic response from the public to this characterization is indicated by the success of all of Jack's recent pictures. This type of hero seems to embody that new element the theatre-goers have been hoping for.

Comedy showing "The Job Dodger."

"Oh, Doctor," Denny's Latest, Now Showing At the Arcade.

Universal Pictures Corporation obtained a "corner" on some of the screen's finest character artists when it selected the cast to support Reginald Denny, star in "Oh, Doctor!", Universal-Jewel coming to the Arcade Theatre today. The picture is the screen version of the celebrated Saturday Evening Post serial of the same name, written by Harry Leon Wilson, and was directed by Harry Pollard who directed Denny in "Sporting Youth" "The Reckless Age" and the first series of "The Leather Pushers."

"Oh, Doctor!", is the story of a young man, who since childhood had been coddled and nursed and made to believe that only by the greatest care could he live. Thru a series of humorous events the story emphasizes the manner of life he leads.

An aunt who has little patience with his fears endeavors to restore him to a normal condition of mind. Then comes the necessity of borrowing money enough to permit him to remain ill in luxury and die in luxury. He will inherit a considerable fortune if he lives three years and after three old Shylocks have been convinced by specialists he has nothing the matter with him, other than his mental attitude.

Mary Astor has the feminine lead in a cast of well known favorites, which also includes Otis Harlan, William Mong, Toni Ricketts and Mike Donlin.

"Coming Through", Coming to Star Friday.

Mines and mining camps—that's the background of Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount picture, "Coming Through," adapted from Jack Bethea's novel, "Red Rock," a picturesque story of the Alabama coal mines, directed by Edward Sutherland, as his first work for the screen.

The picture, which opens next Friday at the Star Theatre, brings the star to the screen in the role of Tom Blackford, employed in the offices of a big steel corporation. Tom has come to the conclusion that to get anywhere in the company one has to have more than mere ability—he has to be someone. So he seizes an opportunity to make love to the president's daughter and marries her.

Blackford gets the chance he has been longing for, but loses the love and respect of his bride while the father, to "even things up" assigns him to the company's toughest camp just outside of Birmingham, Ala.

The home office at Pittsburgh places its production schedule at an unjustly high figure and, despite the fact that he knows everyone to be against him, Tom buckles up and determines to "come through."

Through sheer power of will he overcomes every obstacle, fights an unruly mob of miners, and their villainous leader, in particular, and wins the love of his estranged bride.

What a part for Meighan!

Lila Lee plays opposite Tom as Alice Rand. Wallace Beery is the treacherous miner, Joe Lawler, who makes several attempts on Blackford's life. John Miltern plays Alice's father, the president of the steel company.

Other prominent players appear in the cast.
