For codling-moth in southern Oregon the growers find that a succession of cover sprays at about two week intervals is applied to get best results in clean fruit. The practice is continued through the early summer months with cover sprays recommended in the experiment station spray program for Oregon.

Luncheon — Stuffed eggs, with beet greens, raisin bread sandwiches, carrot pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner — Smothered chicken, boiled rice, frozen custard, sponge cake, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

Carrot Pudding.

One bunch new carrots, 2 cups bread crumbs from soft part of loaf, 1-2 cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 1 pound candied cherries, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon salt.

Wash and scrape carrots. Cook in slightly salted boiling water until tender. Rub through a fine sieve. Cream butter and beat in sugar. Add well beaten yolks of eggs and beat mixture well. Add bread crumbs, cinnamon, cherries cut in quarters, salt and carrot pulp. Fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Turn into a well buttered mold and steam two and one-half hours. Serve with lemon sauce. The carrots should have enough water in which they are cooked to make the pudding moist. However, if necessary, milk can be added to make the pudding slightly moist.

Wear Necklace Down the Back

If you draw a V from shoulder line to waistline, and then scoop out the material inside the V you uncover quite an expanse of back. If this bothers you at all, follow the plan of Carmel Myers and wear one of the new back necklaces of diamonds and pearls—just like the pendant effects that were once worn down the front. It breaks up the dead white of the shoulders and offers some explanation for the cut of the frock. Really, it's a very smart thing to do these days.

Law 39 Years Old Is Used Against 'Leggers

TACOMA (AP).—The valhallic words "thirty-four fifty" have struck terror into the hearts of many bootleggers in this section, and they have more significance to the rum-running fraternity than all the clauses in the Volstead law.

"Thirty-four fifty" means section 3450 of the revised federal statutes, and covers an act passed by congress in 1886. It refers to the transportation of articles that have not paid an internal revenue tax, and provides that the vehicle used for such transportations shall be confiscated.

The Volstead law has a somewhat similar provision, but federal prosecutors here found that forfeitures under it were not successful owing to conditional sales of automobiles.

So the government attorneys decided to use the power provided by section 3450, and they have been employing it with great effect. Every few weeks the United States marshal holds an auction sale of automobiles confiscated because they were hauling liquor on which no federal tax was paid. In several cases a jury has found the operator of a rum carrier innocent, but his car has been libelled under section 3450 and ordered sold.

Wallace Mount, assistant U. S. district attorney, says that the government has obtained the forfeiture of every automobile or truck libelled under section 3450 in this district.

England's Air Chief Draws Dire Picture of Air Warfare

CAMBRIDGE, Eng. (AP)—The assertion by Air Marshal Sir Hugh Trenchard, chief of the British air staff, that he would do away with aviation altogether if he could, has caused no end of comment throughout the country. Sir Hugh was speaking to the Cambridge University Aeronautical Society, and his contention was that all the good done through aviation commercially would not make up for the reign of terror and death which would be accomplished through this force if there should be another world war, when great bombs and poisonous gases would be strewn upon almost helpless cities.

Sir Hugh reviewed the problem of the air defense of the British empire and its potentialities during the next 50 years, speaking very frankly and plainly indeed upon the main principles which must guide the nation in its right and economical use of aviation.

"I do not want you to think that I look upon the air as a blessing altogether," asserted Sir Hugh. Continuing he said, much to the astonishment of his listeners: "It may be more of a blessing for this empire than for any other country in the world, but I feel that all the good it will do in civil life cannot balance the harm that may be done in war by it, and if I had the casting vote I would say abolish the air."

This particular phrase of the air chief's remark caused more newspaper comment than has any utterance of an official of his standing in years.

Relative to a European war in which England might be seriously attacked, the air chief said: "The great problem to be faced is that in the first clash of the opposing forces the casualties would be very high, and the question of replacing the reserves would be difficult. In fact they would be almost inoperable, not only for this nation, but also for any other nation."

In the next war in a single day, the speaker said he believed, more bombs could be dropped in this country than was done in the four years of the last great conflict. While the airplane was the most offensive weapon that had ever been invented, Sir Hugh averred, it was a shockingly bad weapon of defense against the airplane itself. Still, he believed, it was the only one that had yet been discovered, and, even in these days of scientific improvements and inventions, he had grave doubts whether any other weapon would take its place for another 100 years.

"Remember that nothing you can do or say will stop all the benefits of aviation, or all the horrors of it. I am sure that the empire is in the forefront of the nations of the world in the air."

The Royal Air Force would not be made the great weapon it must be without the backing of the nation, said the air chief, and he was convinced that one of the most important means was through the larger seats of learning. For that reason the government was eager to start at Oxford and Cambridge air force units as a beginning, and the officials hoped to do the same at other universities at a later date.

Doing a lot of work couldn't be so bad if we could do it quickly without any effort.

Northwest Indians Adorn Tribal Graves in Tacoma

TACOMA (AP)—Graded, lawned and decorated with suitable monuments, the old Indian cemetery adjoining the Cushman veterans' hospital here has been completely transformed through the efforts of local Indians, assisted by a government appropriation.

The cemetery contains the remains of some of the leading Indians of the northwest, and about 2,-000 aborigines have been buried there since it was established in 1852.

One of the graves especially revered by the Indians is that of Chief Leschi, who was hanged in 1858 on a charge of killing an American army officer who was on his way to a parley with the Indians. The Indians have always considered Leschi a martyr, and some American historians have declared that he was innocent of the charge against him.

Chief Saltai, who ruled the Indians of this region from 1851 to 1866 is also buried in the cemetery. He was a great friend of the early white settlers and was a convert to the Christian religion. In addition to Indian chiefs of the Nisqually, Puyallup and other tribes, the cemetery contains the bones of Tom Thompson, noted as a great Indian judge. He handled legal matters for the Indians for many years.

Local Newspapers Reinitiate When Mexico Belittles Crime

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Barred from police headquarters because, they assert, their papers published the truth about crime in the capital in April and May, police reporters on the leading papers have devoted their efforts to outside investigation. As a result they claim to have proofs that, during the early days of May, the crime average reached 102 cases daily.

Investigation of records at the prosecuting attorney's office has disclosed, according to El Universal, that 80,000 cases are consigned annually to the penal courts. During the first trimester of 1924, it is stated, there were 2,287 cases of assault, resulting in injury, and 1,272 of robbery.

Statistics secured at the Federal District penitentiary and the Belen and municipal jails, the same paper asserts, show that 70,914 persons were either detained or imprisoned in these institutions during 1924.

Ninety-five percent of those held for infractions of the penal and civil codes, it is declared, go unpunished.

The only thing you can prove by arguing with a fool is that you are another one.

Gunboat with Dewey's Fleet Crumbles at Seattle Wharf

SEATTLE, (AP)—The gunboat Princeton, which was with Admiral George Dewey when he won the Battle of Manila Bay 27 years ago, is crumbling at a wharf on Lake Washington opposite Seattle.

The Princeton cost $250,000 in 1897 when she was launched at Camden, N. J. A Seattle lawyer bought her in 1919 for $48,000 and has been trying ever since to sell her.

After the Spanish-American war the Princeton remained in Pacific waters and was sent to Samoa. There she hit an uncharted rock, and was about to sink when she limped into Tutuila. She was put out of commission, and four years later was brought to the University of Washington for a training ship.

The lawyer bought her when the University discontinued instruction in navigation.

Hood River Folk Coming.

HOOD RIVER, Or.—Local interest in the Portland Rose Festival was increased by an address delivered by Herbert C. Cuthbert, publicity manager of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, to the Hood River business women's club at the Columbia Gorge hotel. Mr. Cuthbert came here to substitute for Mrs. Doris Smith, author of the Rosaria pageant, who had been detained because of a dress rehearsal.

Mr. Cuthbert told of the intensive work of the author in studying the development of the rose from the days of cave men down to the present. The Portland publicity man was informed that a record attendance to the Rose show would be noted from here as a result of the interest taken in the local uniformed marching organizations, whose members will participate in parades.

Westerners know what a tire should be,

ONE glimpse of California, or Oregon, or Washington, or any Western state proves that the West is the motor ground of America!

California, for instance, leads New York and every other state in registration of passenger automobiles!

* * *

A group of successful Akron tire engineers caught a vision of the opportunities in the West. Its vast resources and possibilities for growth appealed to them.

Digging into the facts, they learned that 30 per cent of the nation's tires are used west of the Mississippi. And only 3 per cent were made there!

* * *

They transferred their skill and resources to the West.

Their C-T-C Cord today is regarded as one of the three or four really fine tires in America. Nine western states give it a remarkable sale. Farther East its good name is rapidly spreading.

We shall be glad to give you expert information about your tires, and — if you need them — put on C-T-C's — either balloons, semi-balloons, heavy-duty cords or oversize cords!
