COMPLETION OF MT. EMILY PLANT NEAR

bermen state that the mill will be the largest pine mill in Oregon under one roof.

The pinner engine—a new rope driven engine which is somewhat of an innovation here—is now being installed and a goodly number of the lumber luggies, which are being manufactured by the La Grande Iron Works, are on the scene. The box department is under the same roof as the planer, under which can accommodate ten 40-foot cars at one time. The planer and building's dimensions are 450 by 140 feet. The flooring is of maple, which will not splinter and which is expected to have an average life of five years.

The boiler house is going up now. Ten boilers now in place will be housed.

Eight Dry Kilns
Eight dry kilns have been constructed 104 feet deep which will hold six trucks. The truck capacity is 10,000 feet of lumber. The first trucking system will be used. The cement on the reinforced kiln roof was being laid Thursday.

The timber dock is practically complete. It is flanked with two tracks and will easily be able to take care of the loading.

Yard's Capacity
The lumber yards, cut into three different areas, will hold a total of 22,000,000 feet. All roads, but especially wide to aid in fire protection, are graded.

The pond, which will hold three million feet at full capacity, is completed as is the log deck.

The burner foundation, 45 feet in diameter, has been laid. The burner is to be air-cooled and is so situated that only a short distance separates it from the sawmill.

The double engine, which will operate the mill machinery, is "ready to go." It is capable of generating 1500 horse power.

Woods Work Progressing
Work in the woods is progressing so as to keep in step with the construction at the plant. When the "mill is ready to begin sawing the log locomotive and eight complete camp car units, which move up through La Grande en route to Five Points June fourth, are in the woods now. The cars consist of one camp office car, one dining car, one kitchen car and five bunk cars. The company has three tank cars—two for oil and one for water—with a capacity of 7,000 gallons and work has been started here on six more cars.

The company is now building a logging railroad into the woods 8 1/2 miles where the woods headquarters camp will be located. "Timber will be brought over that line to Hildard where it will be transferred to the Union Pacific road and shipped on to the plant here.

Four miles of rail have already been laid and the roadbed is completed four and one-half miles further on. The plan now is to have approximately two men at work in the woods to one in the home plant.

Long Operation
Present indications are that the company will have at least four years operation on Five Points and vicinity. It will take from 40 to 45 million feet to run the mill for a year. The cut per day will be 150,000 feet.

Company officials plan to utilize every portion of the log and will turn out quality stuff in preference to quantity. The Stange interests in Wisconsin, where they have long operated several mills, have enjoyed a reputation of furnishing lumber of excellent quality for the markets and the plant here will adhere to the same high standard. To them the plant here means a change in location of operations, due to the gradual diminishing of supply in the Central West.

The company in Wisconsin has been interested in such and door and finish staff production during its operations there, and at one time is said to have had 400 men employed in that department.

Company officials state that enough timber is available to assure the mill of approximately 10 years operation. The timber owned in fee simple will supply the mill for 25 years and the government reserve resources will add another quarter century.

All in all, the plant, although undoubtedly it will present a far finer appearance when completed, has already begun to assume shape that promises much for La Grande and vicinity. Some idea of the immensity of the plant can be gained from the fact that several thousand dollars must be spent on saw-wood to start the mill, although the mill, after it begins operations, will supply its own fuel.

BIBLE SCHOOL TERM CLOSED

Cost Not High.
The school cost the community $241.77, less than twenty-five cents a week per enrollment. This includes a little remuneration to eight people for supervision of the school and very near seventy-five dollars for books for the school. The books will serve for another year.

Many of the children were eager that the school continue for a week and some for a month longer. They were all enthusiastic in their request that the school be held another year. All of which is a compliment to those who had the faith to launch the movement in the beginning.

Andrews says that Chinese soldiers have confiscated every camel, car and mule for a hundred miles beyond Kalgan, the base from which the expedition started.

It was found necessary to drive their camels far out into the desert to keep them from the soldiers.

Confiscate Mules
Andrews' reports were made to an Erie man whose financial assistance did much to make the expedition possible. The man, whose name cannot be disclosed, died recently and the reports are being received by others interested in the expedition.

The expedition is conducting a search for dinosaur eggs and traces of human evolution. The plans called for the penetration of the
