Sister Mary Says:

Breakfast — Cantaloupe, codfish puffs, corn muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon — Baked spinach, raisin bread, raspberry bavarian cream, cup cakes, milk, tea.

Dinner — Braided mutton cutlets, new potatoes in white sauce, kale in lemon butter, head lettuce salad with Thousand Island dressing, pineapple pie, oatmeal bread, milk, coffee.

The train bread suggested in the luncheon menu makes delicious sandwiches for a picnic or afternoon tea, hot or cold. A filling of cream cheese may be used although just the bread with plenty of butter is quite as desirable.

Hotdish Bread

One cup bran, 1 cup Graham flour, 1 cup whole wheat flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup seeded raisins, 1/2 cup molasses, 1 cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 egg.

Mix bran, Graham flour, whole wheat flour, salt and raisins. Stir until raisins are evenly coated with flour. Beat egg well and add molasses. Dissolve soda in milk and add egg mixture. Add dry ingredients and beat well for 3 minutes. Turn into 2 small bread pans, well oiled and floured and bake 1 hour in a moderate oven.

Nuts coarsely chopped, can be added with the raisins if the bread is not planned for small children.

FIRE RAZES WAREHOUSE

EUGENE, Ore. — A storage warehouse owned by W. E. Nustbaum, chief of the Eugene fire department, and occupied by the Oregon Transfer company at the foot of Willamette street, was destroyed by fire. Chief Nustbaum's residence, 100 feet east of the warehouse had a narrow escape and a long row of wooden warehouses on the Southern Pacific tracks nearby were endangered.

The loss was $5000 with little insurance.

EASY LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

Copyright 1924 by Wynne, Jr.

One of the puzzling questions that perplexes the average auction player is how to distinguish between a business double that is intended to defeat the contract and an informative double that is an offering partner for a bid. There is no better way to answer this question than by a careful consideration of the usual situations in which the point is involved.

First: A double of one of a suit or of one trump is always a request for partner's suit. The small of the contract previously any desire on the doubler's part to defeat the contract unless his partner has the necessary strength in his own hand. In that case, however, partner should be on the alert and try for the penalty.

Second: The double of an original bid of two no-trump, however, is a different proposition. Such a double should indicate the desire of the doubler to defeat the contract and his partner should pass unless his hand is of such a rank type that a bid of his own suit is advisable. If not good judgment to double two no-trumps and ask partner to bid three of his suit for the reason that if the two no-trump bid is sound, a three bid is doomed to defeat before it is made. That is, a very common sense.

Third: In the case of a double of a suit bid of two, a little different question arises. It is usually more difficult to defeat a suit bid than a no-trump bid so that it's good judgment to bid your own suit in case partner doubles an original suit bid of two. In case partner doubles a suit bid of three, it is usually better judgment to try to defeat the contract than to try for a problematical bid of your own. The double of a three bid marks the dividing line for in only very few isolated cases will an informative double of a three bid be of any value. The double of any higher bid than three is, of course, always a business double.

Fourth: Suppose the dealer bids one no-trump, second hand bids two hearts, third hand bids two spades and the dealer doubles to such a double intended to defeat the contract or is it informative and asking partner for a bid? This is a very close question but in the writer's opinion should be interpreted as a business double. The original bid of no-trump and the double of the suit bid should indicate in addition to the no-trump, strength in the suit bid and a desire to defeat the contract. That seems only good judgment. The writer has carefully analyzed this situation for years and has come to the conclusion that a business double at least three times as valuable as the informative double. It is still an open question, however, and the writer is only giving his opinion for what it is worth.

Fifth: Suppose the Dealer bids one spade, second hand bids two hearts, third and fourth hand pass and the dealer doubles. Is such a double intended to defeat the contract or is it informative and asking partner for a bid? This is not a close question like the fourth case for the bid of a suit merely indicates strength in the suit. The subsequent double indicates additional strength but rarely in the suit doubled. For that reason it is good judgment to regard such a double invariably as an informative double. Partner should bid either his long suit or if his own suit is too weak, two of his partner's suit.

Sixth: Suppose the dealer bids one spade, second hand bids two hearts and the dealer's partner doubles. Is this double intended to defeat the contract or is it informative and asking partner for a bid? There is no doubt about this situation. The double is made after hearing from partner and therefore must be intended to defeat the contract. The double is acting not only on his own hand but also on his partner's, the nature of which has been shown by the original bid of one spade. For that reason any double made after partner has bid, should always be regarded as a business double.

Seventh: Suppose the dealer bids one spade, second hand bids two hearts, fourth hand and the dealer pass and second hand doubles. Is such a double intended to defeat the contract or is it informative and asking partner for a bid? The answer to this seems simple. If second hand had wanted partner to bid, he could have asked him to do so by doubling four spades. Therefore, when he passes one spade and subsequently double two hearts, the reasonable conclusion is that he is doubting with intent to defeat the bid. In other words, if a player doesn't double an opponent's bid at his first opportunity, a double of a subsequent bid is always to be regarded as a business double.

Eighth: Suppose the dealer bids one spade, second hand bids two hearts, fourth hand and the dealer pass and second hand again doubles. Is this double intended to defeat the contract or is it informative and asking partner for a bid? In this case also, the answer seems simple. Second hand doubled one spade for the purpose of finding out his partner's best suit. The dealer's partner has tried to block that plan by his shut out bid of two of three spades. If second hand again doubles, he is merely repeating his request for a bid and in even more emphatic terms. That is really the reasonable viewpoint and the only one that can be taken.

From the foregoing summary the writer would recommend the following interpretation of informative and business doubles:

A double of a bid of one no-trump or of a bid of one, two or three of a suit is informative and asking partner for a bid, provided the double is made at first opportunity and before partner has made a bid. The only exception occurs when partner bids a no-trump and then doubles an adverse bid. Such a bid is always a business double. Conversely, a double of a bid of two or more no-trumps or of four or more of a suit, or a double after partner has bid, or a double not made at first opportunity, are business doubles and intended to defeat the bid.

Hospitable Monks to Reap Revenue from Their Guests.
ST. HELENS, Switzerland, (A.P.) — The monks of the convent of St. Bernard are to enter the hotel business. Their hospitality, which has been proverbial for centuries, has been taken advantage of to such an extent that it became impossible to accommodate all who wished to be their guests.

The monks, therefore, decided to build a hotel near the convent, where travelers might be put up for the night. Their original plan was to let the hotel concession to some restaurant. Now they have decided that they might as well conduct the place themselves and obtain the revenue for their order.

FIRE NEAR SNOWSHOOTS

MEDFORD, Ore. — Paradoxical as it may seem, half of the large crew of men at work clearing off the main road in Crater national park has been taken off that work this week to fight a forest fire in the park near Union peak, caused by lightning striking a snag in an old burn. The fire was thought to be under control.

The road is now clear of snags to within a half mile of the lodge and will be cleared to the lodge soon. However, the heat wave has melted the snow so fast along the road the past few days that the mud between Anna Springs camp and Government camp makes automobiles.

To Get Aphid On Beans Early Spray Is Needed

The appearance of black aphids on beans and squash and late is of less so sudden as to astonish the grower. It seems to him that almost overnight his clean, fine-looking vegetables have become fairly "fuzzy" and must now be sprayed with discolored liquids that spoil the bright, clean look.

This seldom happens just that way, at least in Oregon, the experienced grower finds. Growers who think they had no chance to get the pests before they begin weeping over the leaves and pods simply overlooked their best chance—putting on the early spray.

Such heavy infestations are usually the result of long-time colonization. Very early, when the plants were quite small, they were visited by a few "piling" immigrants of the aphid clan. These propagated slowly as the plants grew, until a powerful though inconspicuous generation or prolific breeders was well established. These were largely on the underside of the leaves and could be seen only by careful inspection. Sometimes it is only a leaf here and there that is infested, and the grower might lift and examine several of the lower leaves without finding them.

Hence the desirability of early sprays—preventive, largely for black aphid on beans and squash, and green aphid on cabbage and rate, in all districts where these pests attack. If this early spray is thrown against the underside of the lower leaves a little before the beans and squash start to vine, it is doubtful whether the pests ever overtake the plants until the last
