La Follette Was Loved By His Fellow Sons

long to discover how high was his standing, among Republicans and Democrats alike, at the capitol.

Who would think, now, that La Follette and the late Senator Lodge were the warmest friends? One of the most dramatic scenes in the Senate's history followed La Follette's first appearance on the floor of the upper house after his independent presidential campaign of 1924.

Senator McCormick was making a speech at the time. La Follette took his seat directly in the shadow of the Illinois senator's wayward arm. It was somewhat difficult for others to reach him under the cloud of this gesture. Lodge dodged about, like a ton-fewweight fighter trying to get past an antagonist's defense, finally seized his chance, ducked under McCormick's shadow, as he tossed a hand on high, and threw his arms about his old friend's neck.

Then others thronged around. The McCormick speech was forgotten and the orator himself joined the reception committee.

When Lodge left Washington to attend last year's Republican convention in Cleveland, it was known his standing with the administrative group of politicians was none too good.

"If there's anything the Wisconsin delegation can do to help you," they say La Follette told him, as they said, "let me know."

A funny offer from the senator's ultra-radical to the ultra-conservative, and doubtless said more than fair in joke—but with more than a little sincerity back of it, for all that.

"Thanks," Lodge is quoted as answering, "but I don't intend to place myself in any position where I'll need help."

The late Boise Penrose, too! Who'd think of him and La Follette as friends?

Yet La Follette, as those who knew him admitted the Pennsylvania, not as a machine politician, but for being so frankly himself—no "bunk," no sham—just, out-and-out, himself.

"What will be the political effect of La Follette's death?" all Washington is asking Progressives aren't a hard-and-fast group. Their leadership varies

WORST READER BELIEVES GOD

But he came back to the mountain of his fathers without his degree and sheepskin.

But degree or none, he went up on his work, tending his bees and cattle and fruit trees week days, mounting his horse, Bible in saddle-bag, and preaching the word of God to some hungry mountaineers on the Sabbath.

"Folks can't begin to doubt one word in the Bible," says the mountain preacher, "without beginning to doubt all of them. And then where'd they be?"

Favors School Law.

Any evolutionary teachings that deny the special creation of man are a menace to the state's young, declares Morgan, and he's for any law that will keep the schools safe for children.

Morgan cast a bright blue eye over skies no bluer.

"At night I sit in front of the cabin and watch the stars," he went on.

"They make me hunger to know things. Why we came and where we're going and if our folks are waiting for us over there."

"But that's sin, and I make myself stop bothering God and just sit still and watch 'em up there all crisp and an' that's enough. He knows, an' that's enough."

"I'm just a homepun plant man and he's in God. Who am I to comprehend the incomprehensible?"

Easy to Believe.

But God comes closer to us folks on the mountains than to those down in the valley. It's easier for us to believe.

"There were 19 of us kids running over these mountains, and our mammy and pappy didn't have much, but they taught us that coal mountain air and spring water and the green grass and the blue sky were enough, and not to be asking for other things."

"I learned to keep satisfied in life. I got another suit of clothes and enough money for burly and I got my Bible and my wife and I am the happiest man alive. I can live on $100 a year up here."

Black smoke rose like a wreath from the lowlands, and the tool of a factory whistle, echoed faintly through the ridges.

"They slave so down there for things they don't need," said the mountain preacher.

"I don't want to take nothing away from life with me but happiness and my belief in my book. I want those little children down there to have that, too."

SHUTDOWN HERE WILL BE BRIEF

year and for the industry as a whole will not average more than five days, according to reports from 41 employment offices in various northwestern cities received here. Some companies report that they will remain closed for two or three weeks while necessary repairs are made, but the majority of large plants will be down less than a week.

Shorter Period for Pine Mills.

The holiday close of pine mills of the Island Empire will be even more brief, the report indicates, and will average not more than three days.

Condensed reports from the various districts follow.

PORTLAND—The Fourth of July shutdowns of Portland and Columbia river sawmills will be brief and the logging camps which are now operating will also be closed but a few days. Almost no saw-mills or camp jobs have been offered during the past week as such now working are holding fast until the holidays. There is a small surplus of laborers in Portland.

RAYMOND, Wn.—After several months of five-day week operation nearly all sawmills on Willapa harbor have returned to full time cutting. Most logging camps are down but there are almost no loggers and very little help of any kind now out of work here.

ABERDEEN—Labor turnover last week was at its lowest point of the year. About 50 per cent of logging camps on Grays Harbor now closed down, others will close about July 2 for short period, probably not more than four days. All mills operating and shut-down will be brief, it is reported. Few unemployed men here.

TACOMA—Little or no labor turnover in the logging or lumbering industries of this district last week. Shutdown of majority of Tacoma sawmills will be brief. A few unemployed loggers in town but not nearly so many as is usual at this time of year.

SEATTLE—Nearly all logging camps on Puget Sound are closed for over the Fourth and resumption of operations will depend largely on weather conditions and the log market. There are few unemployed loggers in Seattle, Everett or Bellingham. Close to a thousand berry pickers and canning factory help were sent to jobs from here last week. College and high school boys working weeks have created a slight surplus of help in this city.

SPOKANE—Large surplus common labor. A few logging camps have closed for over the Fourth and there is a considerable number of woodsmen in the city.

WALLA WALLA—Harvest starts late next week. More men than will be needed now in this district.

PENDLETON—More men than jobs here but harvest which starts in about two weeks may take care of the balance.

YAKIMA-TOPPENISH—Large surplus of help. Migratory workers coming and going in large numbers.

WENATCHEE—Small fruit picking finished. Plenty of men.

CALADOC DISTRICT—Outlook for harvest good. Enough men here.

ELK RIVER—Woods operations all running full handed.

Argentina Anxious to Send Students to United States

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—At a recent meeting of the Argentine section of the International Educational Institute, the exchange of graduates between American and Argentine universities was strongly advocated. It was resolved that this should be principally on the basis of providing these students with chairs of their own language in the country where they intend continuing their studies, and thus give them opportunity, by teaching, to earn their living expenses. A knowledge of the language of the country was also established as a necessary qualification for obtaining these professorships.

The meeting also resolved to accept an offer of the American section of the institute to send to Buenos Aires a woman graduate of the School of Domestic Economy of Columbia University to give a course of lectures, and also commissioned Edward M. Pesley, the American commercial attaché here, to resume negotiations already started towards establishing a number of technical scholarships for Argentine students in some of the great industrial establishments in the United States.
