LA GRANDE WINS FROM BEARS, 9-8

(Continued from Page One.) yielded three runs. Helm walked, went to second on Cunningham's sacrifice, stole third. McKenna walked, and both scored when Gossett smashed out a neat three base hit. Faust scored Tom with a single and stole second before the next two men went down.

Again in the second inning, after a one-two-three for Walla Walla, the Bears dominated Wright's reputation mightily. Knight connected for two bases, Helm went to first on an error and stole second and Knight romped home when Helm sacrificed. McKenna singled, bringing in Helm, but the side was retired when the collegian was thrown out at second.

Rally Nets Four. With a 5 to 3 lead, things looked bright for the home team but Walla Walla wouldn't let 'em stay that way long. Peterson struck out and then Wright, Dean and Olsen singled successively. Olsen's smash brought Wright in and Garritt's single, coupled with a brace of costly errors by La Grande's collegians, McKenna and Cox, cleaned the bases.

La Grande scored one in the fourth but Walla Walla tied it up in the fifth with two singles and an error that brought two men home.

Another runner scored for the Bears in the sixth but Walla Walla, counting two in the eighth, taking the lead for the first time, 4 to 3.

Gossett Starts Rally.

Big Tom Gossett came up in first in the ninth and connected with the hardest hit ball of the day, barreling home for two bases. Knight followed up with a single, scoring Gossett and ending up the count. Cox gained first on Wright's error and Red Alexander surprised the fans by smacking out a single with two men on. Of course the first man across was all that was needed and the fans went home, jubilant. It was a glorious rally and a nice way to end a ragged game.

Beck, pitching for the visitors after Wright was pulled at the end of the second, pitched much better ball, although his support wasn't much to speak of. Beck's best word saved him two or three times at that.

Gossett received 13 batters, 10 hits and did not allow a run, but proved his all around versatility. The only thing that Tom hadn't tried now is the outfield and he has made a success of every start.

Knight Hitting Star.

Tex Knight, first baseman, turned in one of the best days work he has ever produced. At bat four times, Tex smashed out two two-base hits and a single and crossed home plate three times. He accepted 10 chances faultlessly. Helm, Gossett and Faust had an on-day, also, spearing a brace of his catch and playing errorless ball.

Dean, Olsen, Garritt and Beck, of Walla Walla, found the apple for safeties twice each. Red Alexander, besides his hit in the ninth, made a snappy recovery of a Texas leaguer and threw his man out at second from a prone position.

Two Seats to be Filled in Progressive Ranks

Magnus Johnson—three, then, are gone, La Follette and Ladd by death, Johnson by defeat.

As a partial offset against the new senator, Thomas Schall's victory over Magnus Johnson, the independents are able to count the retirement of the very regular senator, Thomas Sterling, in favor of W. H. McMaster—not an "intruder," progressive but as much so, say as Horah and Cousins.

There remain La Follette's and Ladd's seats to be filled. La Follette's seems certain to be filled by a man he himself would have chosen—his son, Bob, Jr., from all indications. The Progressives are hopeful as to Ladd's, too.

So, however, are the "regular" Republicans. Ladd's state was "pro" the present national administration at the last election, which is what the "regulars" base their faith on. It was quite progressively so, however, which is what encourages the independents.

All in all, it looks as if Ladd's successor, if not an out-and-out insurgent like Ladd himself at least will fall, like McMaster, in the Horah and Cousins class.

At last, altogether, the question, however, of how the seats will be filled next December. There's the future also to be looked into—the latter half of President Coolidge's present term.

The administration is quite likely to lose some senate seats to the Democrats next year. Republican members of the upper house come up for re-election in Arizona, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri and Oklahoma. These states choose Democrats often more than they do Republicans.

Other states in which newcomers must be chosen to Republican seats are Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Nevada, New York, Utah and Washington. These are at least doubtful.

It will be odd if out of this dozen of commonwealths, the Democrats don't score some gains and the Republicans suffer a few losses.

So the administration can't afford to have much inactivity in its own ranks. If it has, the same situation will prevail which has prevailed since the middle of President Harding's administration—the insurgents will hold the balance of power, and use it against the president.

The Progressive "bloc" is a bit rattled at the moment, yes, but to assume that it's done for, as the "regulars" have been doing since La Follette and still more since Ladd died, is premature until time is given to see how well the independents rally.

ports and the places where the crowds gathered. The Grand Ronde River, the Minam, the Wallawa River, Bear Creek and other streams all had their full quota of campers and fishermen.

July fourth this year served the double duty of an observance of the Independence Day and National Defense day. Although no demonstration was held a good deal of interest was manifested in the National Defense Day proceedings.

Major Ralph Huron reported this morning that upon checking up the list of signers of the defense day blanks he found that a total of 312 American citizens had affixed their signatures signifying their willingness to help the United States Government in case of emergency.

TRADE PACT VIEWS VARY

WASHINGTON (AP)—The question of future commercial reciprocity, as well as of diplomatic relations, is occupying the character of the Washington diplomatic corps.

Since the Senate ratified the commercial treaty with Germany, drafted as a standard for similar pacts with other countries, diplomatic agents have busied themselves in studying it and forwarding reports to their governments.

Opinions in foreign circles, varying according to the commercial situation in the different countries, are generally unanimous in condemning certain provisions of the standardized treaty, while praising others. Most of the European nations are dealing with the United States under very old commercial treaties and it is realized these soon will have to be brought up to date.

In the case of Turkey, no treaty, commercial or otherwise, now exists, actual intercourse is proceeding, however, without serious encouragement to American business interests in Turkey. The Senate failed at the last session to ratify the treaty with Turkey and it is expected the situation will remain unchanged until the Senate meets in December. Rear Admiral Bristol, now acting as American high commissioner in Turkey, will continue to handle American interests there until a more satisfactory relationship is established.

The principal opposition in foreign quarters to the German commercial treaty is in the Senate reservation under which Congress retains the power, after one year, to revoke those clauses which stipulate that no preferential treatment shall be accorded American shipping or goods transported in American bottoms, without allowing identical advantages to German goods and shipping. As against this, however, foreign diplomats consider that the United States accepted for the first time in the treaty the European conception of "favored nation treatment."

This clause is set forth in Article seven of the treaty, which reads: "Each of the two high contracting parties binds itself to give to the national vessels and goods of the other the advantage of every favor, privilege, or immunity which it shall have accorded to the national vessels and goods of a third state, and regardless of whether such favored state shall have been accorded such treatment gratuitously or in return for reciprocal compensatory treatment."

It is held by some of the diplomats, however, that satisfactory commerce with the United States can only be established by a trade policy covering a long stretch of years.

On the whole, the most influential diplomatic counselors here believe various objections brought against the treaty are not of sufficient importance to overbalance the general spirit of the agreement.

The reports show, however, that logging was comparatively inactive and that only a little more than 50 per cent of the fir camps are operating today. Labor turnover at the mills is one of the highest in years.

They hold that the document was drawn with the intention of initiating a policy of rigorous and universal equality of commercial treatment. This attitude they hold to be fair. The attitude toward the European conception of "favored nation" treatment is ascribed in the same circles to the need of American industries to acquire and hold foreign markets.

SCHOOL OF COOKING TO START SOON

It will be a pleasure to work with the La Grande Observer in its undertaking to create still greater interest in better cooking for it is my work to show that good cooking is a pleasure to perform, just as it is to eat," Mrs. Whiswell declared when interviewed this morning. "I hope that I will be able to meet as many of the home-keepers of La Grande as are interested in better cooking during my stay in your city."

"The one thing I wish to state about cooking is that there is no mysterious element about it, that precludes any woman from making the most delicious cakes, pies, cookies, meats, etc., just careful work and of course a Westinghouse electric range."

"The bootleggers are bold," Governor Pinchot said, "because they know that the government of the United States has never yet determined to put an end to their criminal traffic. They know, you know, and I know that the Treasury department could have set its foot down at any time and removed this scandal from the good name of the United States."
