Benjamin's Hiding Place to Be Restored

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP).—Restoration work on the old Gamble mansion, hiding place of Judah P. Benjamin, secretary of state of the Southern Confederacy, is expected to begin as soon as the $10,000 appropriated for the purpose by the Florida legislature becomes available.

The appropriation was made at the request of the Judah P. Benjamin chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, which offered to purchase the property and donate it to the state, on condition that the latter would restore and maintain it.

The old mansion, located at Tallahassee, in Manatee county, will be preserved as a memorial to the Southern states' history and as a fitting example of southern architecture of the ante-bellum period.

The house was built in 1847, according to the records of Manatee county. It was constructed almost entirely of native materials, and is of the classical style of architecture characteristic of the day. Situated on the three-acre plot of ground, just a mile back from the Manatee river, the mansion overlooks a rich white expanse of water. The Gamble came to Manatee county from Louisiana; it is particularly well known for its sugar plantations. But all fortune appears to have faded from it at every turn, and the place finally was sold. It passed through the hands of successive owners until the Civil war, when the house was occupied by Captain Archie McNeill. It was while he was in possession of the place, in 1862, that the events transpired which made the Gamble mansion one of the historic spots of the South.

Judah P. Benjamin, secretary of state of the Confederate, and at the close of the Civil war authorities offered a reward of $50,000 for the capture of the Southern cabinet officer. The reward of a "lost cause," Benjamin began a flight to England. En route, he sought safety in the Gamble mansion, where he remained in hiding for some time.

SALTEM SEEKS NEW MILL

SALTEM, Ore.—That a new manufacturing industry to be known as the Western Paper Converting company, maker of paper products, will probably establish a factory in Saltem, with a capitalization of $200,000, and a plant accommodating the employment of from 150 to 200 persons, became known here. The choice of location here, it is said, between Saltem and Vancouver, Wash., but Saltem has in its favor certain advantages, one of which is that the Oregon Pulp & Paper company offers to give the new concern a site on Front street.

Mainly interested in the project are E. J. Moseley of Los Angeles, A. D. Alpine of Seattle and R. A. O'Neill, for some time with the Oregon Pulp and Paper company.

We will soon be in our new location on the corner of Adams and Elm.
