BANKRUPT ACT IS EXPLAINED

entirely taken the place of all state enactments for the assignment of creditors. Creditors are notified by publication in the newspaper. The National Bankruptcy Act. There have been several such acts upon the statute books at different times and they are general in almost all countries and as stated the present act in the United States dated from 1898.

How Filing Is Done.
As to the person entitled to take advantage thereof, I will state that there are two methods of filing bankruptcy. The one is involuntary bankruptcy, where three creditors whose claims amount to more than $500 file an involuntary petition against a person or firm and the court then determines whether or not said person or firm is bankrupt, and if so they are so declared. Such a petition cannot be filed against a farmer or a laborer or salaried man, and can only be filed against a corporation. An individual engaged in what is generally termed "business pursuits," a voluntary petition, however, may be filed by any person or corporation either laborer, farmer or otherwise, and when such a petition is filed, show that the person is bankrupt, in other words he does not have enough assets to pay his liabilities, said petition is granted as a matter of course and the person is so adjudicated.

The person desiring to file such petition goes to whatever attorney that he may desire the same as in any other legal matter and the petition and schedules are prepared by the attorney. The applicant files same and upon prepared are sent to the clerk of the United States District Court for whatever district such person may be residing in (in this state there being but one district and the clerk being in Portland). As stated said petitions are granted as a matter of course where they show that the person applying for bankruptcy and the adjudication in bankruptcy is made by the judge of the court. As the matter of administering upon such cases would be burdensome upon the judge of the court and as the expense of going to the headquarters of the court would be prohibitive upon the applicant in bankruptcy, the court has scattered throughout the territory what are known as referees in bankruptcy, said referees having one or two counties under their respective jurisdiction and the cases arising in said district are then handled by the referees. The referee knows nothing about the applicant, the filing of the petition, until the same has been actually filed with the clerk of the court, the order of adjudication made by the judge and the order of reference and the papers returned to the referee for administration by him.

Another point upon which there is a great deal of misinformation is as to the amount of debts that one before filing a petition of the amount that the debtor has to pay out in such proceedings; as to a voluntary petition there is no minimum fixed for the granting of a petition, neither is it necessary that any percentage whatsoever be paid to the creditors as the estate is administered upon and if there is anything for distribution to creditors it is so distributed and if not nothing is paid. In the first place all of the costs of administration have to be paid and then preferred claims such as taxes, wages, liens and other similar items have to be paid before the general creditors receive any distribution of assets. I might further add that the local referee is not consulted as to whether or not a person shall or may take bankruptcy for as stated the first that he knows about it is when the papers are returned to the court. I do know that as an individual that wherever possible, I discourage the taking of one's own observations that the average attorney does the same thing and will try to have the applicant work the matter out in some other way than the filing of bankruptcy. I know of several instances that have come under my own observation where the party who had really made other arrangements and had worked the matter out without taking advantage of the bankruptcy act and has been advised to do by his attorney. I would therefore state that neither the court, the referee, nor the attorneys, are in any way to blame for the taking of bankruptcy by those who take advantage of the act. There probably are cases where the person filing bankruptcy could have worked it out had such person referred to neither the court, the referee nor the attorney is to blame if such a person does not wish to try and wishes to take advantage of the act. The only "in" in the person actually bankrupt" and if so such a person is entitled to the benefit of the act upon filing the proper petition.

I hope that the information contained in this statement will be of some assistance to the merchants and persons who extend credit to others and with a full knowledge of the provisions of the act they should be better able to determine as to whether or not they should extend credit in particular cases.

Very truly yours,
H. E. DIXON,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

Wallowa Lake Delighted Members of Caravan

In time for lunch and La Grande for a happily arranged dinner (served by the Union County Chamber of Commerce). The drive from La Grande to Wallowa Lake was completed in the sunset and later the light of a glorious full moon that lit up the deep canyons and the magic valley of the Wallowa in spectacular fashion.

The story of July 4 in the terms of the caravan is the tale of a friendly capture. "What is Enterprise?" Enterprise and that from the crack of the gun. The party came back from Wallowa Lake in the morning in time for a cowboy breakfast of fruit, sourdough bread, coffee, more real cream than anyone ever saw before, and hot thrilling initiations that were both thrilling and—stinging.

There was a Fourth of July parade of the most original sort which the caravan cars joined, then a busy return to the lake in order to come back to Enterprise, have another parade, this time around the racetrack of the county fairgrounds, and then to spectators at a thrilling Wild West show, with all horses and riders from Wallowa county.

Blamed on Horse.
In one event, at least, the Portlanders were more than spectators. In a "surprise horse race," given without notice to the riders, Roy Heath won first "Shanty" Morgan second, George W. Senesch third and Dr. Charles McCaughey came in a distant last. The minister says, however, that it wasn't his poor riding, but the horse they gave him. At any rate no rider fell off, and the time seemed no longer than from now to Christmas.

The evening of the Fourth was vivid with fireworks and entertainment at the lake. A record of the whole was taken in motion picture by Stuart Featherstone of the Journal-Weekend, and it will be shown for the first time at the Liberty Theater in Portland next Saturday. On the return trip The Journal scout car, driven by Phil O'Toole, left the Enterprise hotel after a wonderful lunch with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McCully at 1:30 p. m. We had dinner at Arlington and reached Portland in the night. It was the wonderful state highway the whole distance, much of it paved and all well finished that made such a journey possible without feeling of haste or danger.

The serious purpose of the journey was as well accomplished as the fun-making phase of it. There has never been such optimism in Eastern Oregon and it is due to the assurance of excellent crops and good prices. That feeling was found at Pendleton, La Grande and all through the Wallowa valley.

Braves Chase Devils
From National Park
ZION NATIONAL PARK, Utah, (AP)—The "devils" were chased out of Zion National Park by three Pinto Indian braves at the recent 1925 season opening celebration of this new national playground. It is Indian legend that Zion Canyon is "the abode of the dead, of spirits and terrible gods" and heretofore few Indians ventured into it during the day, and none would ever stay at night.

This Indian superstition proved a blessing to early settlers, and during Indian raids they always found Zion Canyon a safe refuge. The Indian name for Zion Canyon is "Makuntweap."

Tom Parachent, Pinto medicine man, was asked by opening day visitors for the exact details of Indian superstitions.

Obituary

MARVIN DANIEL

COVE, Ore. (Special)—Marvin Daniel, about 18 years of age, who has been employed as head herdsman at Phymere Farm, Hot Lake, for the past year, died at the sanatorium following a major operation.

The deceased was the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Daniel of Cove and had just returned from two weeks attendance at a summer school in Corvallis.

Funeral services over the remains of Marvin Daniel will be held Thursday morning at 10 o'clock at the Methodist church at Union with Reverend Quinn officiating. Interment will take place in the Union cemetery. The remains are at the Bohnekamp chapel today.

ern advertising methods applied to the Ten Commandments "would soon change them from stern prohibition laws to factors contributing to true happiness," declared Charles C. Hamilton of Boston, speaking at today's session of the thirtieth International Christian Endeavor convention.

"Modern advertising then should adopt the positive form of the commandments in order to convince the public that they were not prohibition laws," said Mr. Hamilton. "Too many persons regard them as prohibition laws and are naturally take delight in violating them. They do not appreciate their constructive value and the contribution their observance make toward the true happiness of the individual and community."
