

PROTESTANTS TO HEAR KING

STOCKHOLM (AP).—Sweden will be host in August to 700 of the world's foremost Christian leaders, including 160 official delegates from the chief Protestant bodies in the United States, chosen to represent their denominations at the universal conference on Christian life and work. The Swedish church and civil authorities have cooperated in formulating an impressive program of public meetings in the capital's leading auditoriums, committee sessions in the house of parliament or in the seclusion of private estates in the suburbs and recreation tours to the country's historic shrines and scenic beauty spots.

The archbishop of Sweden, Nathan Soderblom, heads the organization committee, and the king will open the sessions with an address of welcome in the state hall of the royal palace. All the delegates will be the guests of Swedish families during their entire stay. At least 1,000 Americans, including families and friends of the delegates, are expected to attend.

The series of conferences, which will occupy the entire month, will begin with that of the world alliance for promoting international friendship through the churches, lasting from August 6th to 8th. From August 9 to 18 there will be the preliminary session of the international committee of the conference of Christian life and work in preparation for the universal conference itself, which will last from August 19 to 30.

The delegates, coming from all parts of the world, will be met by official travel marshals at various ports. The Swedish government has granted free pass visas to all delegates.

The principal public sessions will be held in the Academy of Music, the religious services and a special communion in the different churches, and open air meetings at Haga and at Slussen, a unique park that reproduces ancient Sweden in miniature. In connection with the 700th anniversary of the cathedral at Visby on Gotland, there has been arranged in the museum of that city an exhibition of medieval and modern church art.

SOFIA (AP).—The Bulgarian government is preparing to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Kingdom and the 50th anniversary of Bulgaria's liberation from Turkish rule.

A series of brilliant festivities and historical exhibitions will be planned. Representatives of all foreign powers will be invited by the Bulgarian government.

MacMillan Will Delve Into America's Earliest History

CHICAGO (AP).—When Commander Donald B. MacMillan left on his Arctic expedition he offered to wager that he again would not see the whole coast of Labrador. Only once in 17 years has MacMillan been able to view its coast because of the wall-like fog. On that one occasion he saw it to be a line of enormous, unfriendly rocks.

Battle Harbor, among the last of the jumping-off places, and where is located a radio station with which MacMillan hoped to do some experimenting, is rock-bound and has what is called a "ticklish" entrance. It is typical of the whole coast. There is no store, a mission, a handful of useful fishermen and sailors and a radio station.

From thence to Etah, Greenland, where MacMillan expects to base his ships, the voyage, is one of sameness in view and routine but one fraught with danger and demanding great skill in maneuvering. If Etah is reached somewhere about August 1, MacMillan will establish an advance airplane base and radio station off Cape Thomas Hubbard, eleven degrees from the North Pole, and from the two points conduct his explorations, photo and map work.

Beside the work to be done in the Polar territory, MacMillan hopes to shed more light on early North American history. The first chapter in an American history generally says that the Norsemen were the first to visit this continent. Back of Disko in Greenland are the ruins of 150 farm houses and 21 churches, believed to be a community established in one of the expeditions during the time of Eric the Red. On the Island of Turnevik off the coast of Labrador there are other ruins which may once have been the homes of the same race. MacMillan will compare his findings to determine if they were of the same origin and were the people which the Eskimos have told him were exterminated in battles with them three centuries ago.
