WHY BUY BOOTLEG

In the dull season now on us, the city is full of out-of-town agents of printing houses, offering so-called low rates. When you get an offer of something cheaper than the usual standard price, or for nothing, always call the police. Main thing—other—there is a nigger in the woodpile. Something has to suffer—service, material or workmanship.

Our usual prices are on a level with our workmanship and service; the former as low as possible, the latter as good as possible. We're always here to correct the dissatisfied customer, which the cheap printing peddler isn't. The peddler with out-throat prices is like a bootlegger selling spiked whisky for hotted goods. Something's hay-wide.

When it's hot—and you don't feel like bringing your orders to our shop, reach for the 'phone, say "Main 71," and pronto, we'll be there, if it's hot along the pavement.

To many a piece of music like every other piece of music is composed of groups of notes placed at varying degrees on the scale. Not so Mr. Looney's conception. Each selection presents a different problem and is worked out accordingly by the band under the leader's direction.

Does the piece call for foot stirring tempo or any other mood, it is played in that manner and is not presented in public until many rehearsals have satisfied the director that the selection is played to the best advantage.

This is what started all the evolution trial fuss in Tennessee. It is a facsimile of the telegram sent by George W. Rappleyea, instrumental in bringing about the indictment as a test of the anti-evolution law, to the American Civil Liberties Union. Since he gives John T. Scopes' name as "Scops", perhaps he didn't know him as well as he has since indicated.

In this Mr. Looney differs from the ordinary band director, many of whom are unable to realize that there are effects to be obtained from a band other than ponderous brass blare. Mr. Looney's band presents the kaleidoscopic tonal colors of a symphony orchestra.

The program opened with a march, "Father of Victory" by Ganne which was followed by scenes from "The Wizard of the Nile" by Victor Herbert.

An idyl "The Glow Worm" by Lincke proved popular and the band played an encore "Oh Katharina" from Ballet's Russian Ballet, "The Chauve Souris." This latter came under the head of what Henry T. Finck characterized as foot music. Played in one step time it proved a pleasant interpolation with which to relieve the heavier numbers.

Excerpts from Franz Schubert's "Blossom Time" and a popular number "No Wonder" concluded the first half of the program before the intermission.

Nearly the entire second half of the program was devoted to the interpretative suite, "Atlantis," by Sargant. This group included (1) Nocturne and Morning Hymn of Fraise, (2) A Court Function, (3) I Live Thee and (4) The Destruction of Atlantis Serenade. As an encore the band played "An Amer-types of box shooks but also turns out finished lumber for shipment.

About 45 men are employed when the mill is running at full capacity. These men operate saws, planers and other modern equipment in the plant.

The machinery is powered entirely by electricity, with individual motors to furnish power for each machine. The lumber comes to the plant sawed in rough boards.

These are run through the planers, trimmed and faced and are then sawed and re-sawed into the proper dimensions for the boxes and crates. The plant turns out a type of box for nearly every sort of article shipped from one point to another.

The majority of the demand for boxes comes from the fruit growers, cherry crates, peaches, prunes, all kinds of berries and then the citrus fruits, oranges and lemons. Boxes are also supplied to what is called the commercial market—the canneries and packing plants, Mill Employes 85.

Lumber for the planing mill and box factory is sawed in the woods by the Menefee company's two sawmills. The largest of the two is located in Ladd canyon, seven miles south of the planer.

This mill has a capacity of 800,000 feet in an eight-hour shift. About 45 men are employed in the mill and logging camp combined.

The company's timber property in the Ladd canyon vicinity includes approximately 55,000,000 feet of mill timber.

The mill at Mount Harris, several miles east of lumber mill saw about 30,000 feet of lumber in an eight-hour day with a force of 50 men.

The lumber from the two mills is hauled to the planing mill by motor trucks and stacked in the yard. The box factory has a capacity of about 40 cars of box shooks a month. Lester Martin is foreman of the planer and Fred Taupin is superintendent of the work at the Ladd Canyon mill.

The Union Box company has not operated for some time but the manager, Fred Jammann, expects to start up within a few weeks. The Union Box company has a normal operating capacity of 29 carloads of box shooks a month. Like the Menefee plant the Union Box company machinery is operated by individual electrical motors on each piece of equipment.

When running the plant employs a force of from 25 to 35 men.

The lumber for the plant is brought from the smaller sawmills which go right to the timber and cut the logs into rough boards so that they may be conveniently hauled to the planer.
