LOCAL ELKS ENTERTAIN VISITORS

Wanted a Rest
Although many preparations had been made for this delegation, what they wanted most was a rest so the Elks' temple served this day very well.

During their stay here the gentlemen from Dallas were taken on a tour of the Grande Ronde valley, treated with refreshments and in their turn brought forth another band which seemed on a par with the first which had already set a very high standard.

With the Dallas delegation was William Hawley Atwell, expected to be the next grand exalted ruler of the Elks.

PORTLAND, Ore. (By the Associated Press).—One thousand Elks are arriving in Portland today to join the throngs already here for the national convention. Colorful decorations, bands, vocal music and flowers greeted the visitors. Each delegation was met by an official welcoming party and escorted to their quarters.

THIS IS THE DAY OF THE "BIGGEST" THINGS. So the biggest electric locomotive in the world has been built as a part of the Virginia Railway rolling stock. The locomotive is 152 feet long, weighs 637 tons, can exert 2125 horsepower, and develops a maximum tractive effort of 277,500 pounds. Photo shows more than 300 Westinghouse Company workmen who contributed to its building.

Russian Authorities Baffled by Vagrant And Child Problems

MOSCOW (AP).—One of the Soviet Russia's greatest unsolved problems is to relieve the thousands of vagrants, destitute children, beggars and unemployed which overflow every city. The greatest of these evils is the appalling number of vagrant and destitute children, which Commissioner of Education Lunacharsky characterizes as "the most terrible ulcer on the Soviet Union's body." Many of these juveniles are addicted to drugs. Others are infected with disease. All are a paralytic menace. "Hundreds of thousands of these children," said Lunacharsky in a recent appeal on behalf of them, "have generated into a state of semi-savagery, some bordering on idleness, while others have had their wits so sharpened and excited by collision with life that they have become dangerous enemies of society."

Of almost equal proportions are the legions of adult paupers and mendicants that the American visitor finds cluttering every street and squatting in front of every church. Their constant cry is, "Khibi, pashabistal! Khibi pashabistal!" ("Bread, please! Bread, please!") In all other outward respects, the occasional American traveler who finds his way to Russia these days of agrarianly surprised to find Moscow quite a normal city, although the most expensive in the world. This army of sorrowful, pauperized Russians that assault one at every turn is the most evident public spectacle in the Bolshevik capital.

The Soviet authorities argue that mendicancy, vagrancy and unemployment are the inevitable concomitants of war and revolution, that Russia probably has no greater share of these evils than other war-affected countries. While the government is trying in every way possible, on the slender means at its disposal, to ameliorate the lot of the unemployed and the destitute, the problem is so huge and so immediate that it is almost beyond control. The reestablishment on a sound basis of Russia's factories and industries, the reentry of foreign capital into the country, and the tapping of Russia's natural resources, foreign observers say, offer the only remedy for the existing evils.

For 20 Cents

KANSAS CITY.—Max Rope, mail carrier, picked up nine sticks of dynamite that fell out of a broken package at the office. It was brimmed and about to spoil. "Throw it away," said a fellow employe. Rope was going to. Then he remembered that his sister-in-law, El, liked ribarb sauce and thought she might as well have it, so he took it home for her. Thereupon the district attorney and several sheriffs got busy and Rope was indicted for theft. The dynamite was worth 20 cents. He was acquitted in short order, but he had to mortgage his home and he lost his job. In a few years he would have been eligible for retirement pay.
