Corn Stalks Valuable As Raw Paper Material

AMES, Iowa, (AP)—A ton of corn stalks in this region has been considered so much agricultural waste, but the chemical engineering department at Iowa state college has found to be worth, at present prices, about $150 a ton when converted into paper.

Prof. G. H. Sweeney, head of the department, has manufactured paper of a fine quality from corn stalks and he believes it can be made to match in quality any stock of woodpulp paper. Prof. Sweeney already has visions of paper mills in these prairie states, bringing back an industry which the country is losing with the passing of its forests.

The question of utilizing corn-stalks for the making of paper involves a number of industrial problems into which the chemists have been delving. Prof. Sweeney's experiments show that by means of a chemical process worked out in his laboratory, six-tenths of a ton of paper can be made from a ton of stalks. Iowa produces between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000 tons of stalks yearly and the United States about 100,000,000 tons.

Oat and wheat straws have been used in the manufacture of strawboard but they are too short-fibered for making higher grades of paper. Cornstalks do not offer this difficulty, said Prof. Sweeney, they being longer in fact than those of wood. Paper manufacturers who have seen the paper made in the laboratory declared it to be of high quality.

The department also discovered a by-product in the paper making process. The liquid extracted from the stalks was found to have high adhesive properties, which might be applied to a new adhesive product.

Full foundation sheets provide straight combs for manipulation, save wax in producing comb honey, and cause the bees to build worker cells. If left to themselves, Oregon bees are prone to build many drone cells. Frames fitted for full sheets of foundation may be bought from bee supply men, and directions for manipulation will be supplied on request by the O. A. C. department of entomology.

BACK IN America for a brief visit is Mrs. R. W. Helmgartner, wife of the American consul to Vienna. She has arrived in Washington with Mr. Helmgartner.

Sister Mary Says:

Breakfast: Berries, cereal, thin cream, soft-cooked eggs, rye toast, milk, coffee.
Luncheon: Cream of spinach soup, toast sticks, stuffed tomato salad, apple sauce, ginger drop cookies, whole wheat bread, milk, tea.
Dinner: Roast leg of lamb, mint jelly, browned potatoes, creamed carrots, jellied fruit salad, cheese, crackers, coffee, milk, graham bread.
Those members of the family who prefer an uncooked cereal for breakfast will like their berries served with the cereal. This means a saving of dishes for the dishwasher and is worth encouraging.
Jellied Fruit Salad.

The "two suited" is a hand that contains two suits of at least five cards each. It is the strongest hand that can be held if played at the best suit of the combined hands. Such a hand is considered on the average six trick better than the usual suit bid, and at least two tricks better than a no-trump bid. This fact shows the importance of the proper bidding of such hands, in order to arrive at the best suit of the combined hands. As dealer, or before partner has bid, if your hand is a "two suited," try to bid both suits, provided, of course, they are sufficiently strong to warrant an original or forced bid. As a general rule, bid the higher valued suit first, provided it contains sufficient strength to warrant the bid. If not, bid the lower valued suit, and show the higher valued suit on second or subsequent round. In the same way, always, if partner has bid no-trump, and you hold a "two suited" always bid both suits, if you have the opportunity. Irrespective of values held, if partner has bid a suit, and you hold a "two suited," bid both suits, unless holding at least one trick better than average support for partner's bid. If, after bidding both suits, partner persists in rebidding his hand, either at no-trump, or a third or possibly a fourth suit, let him have the bid. You have informed him of the character of your hand, and it is for him to decide. The only exception to this rule is a "two suited" so strong that you have a game in one of the suits, irrespective of partner's hand. If partner supports one of your suits, it is not advisable to bid the other suit unless such suit is a major suit and the first suit bid is a minor suit.

If, as dealer, or second hand, you have bid a no-trump and your partner shows two suits, always support one of them if possible.

If the former, Y should over-trump and should then win the balance of the tricks. If A discards, Y should discard the queen of hearts and then must win the last two tricks. At trick four, if B leads a heart, Y should win and lead the diamond so that Y-Z get the same play as before. At trick three, if B refuses to win the trick and lead the heart which Y should win and return the diamond. No matter what B now does after winning the trick, Y-Z win the balance of the tricks. It is a tricky little problem but interesting and instructive.

Broken Army Rule Music World's Gain

Lee Pattison, whose piano music is known to multitudes of Americans, was dying in an army hospital in France when life was given back to him from an unexpected source, according to a story in the Osteopathic Magazine for July.
Dr. Perrin T. Wilson was a hospital attendant with the rank of private because the army rules did not recognize his degree of Doctor of Osteopathy, although he was registered as a physician in the state of Massachusetts.
Dr. Wilson had a hard day's work behind him, and another ahead of him on the morrow, but that night in a camp hospital at St. Arnaud, Cher, France, he knew that a private soldier was dying of pneumonia following a stitch abscess which in turn followed an operation for appendicitis—and save the boy. And so, despite the rules, he tolled that night, little dreaming of the future pleasure his work was providing for the music lovers of America.
