Film Comedy Kings Try For Laugh Every 20 Feet

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. (AP)—The average two-reel comedy contains 75 laughs and the picture that audiences will about afterwards has a laugh provoking incident at approximately every 20 feet of film. Ed. Lord, director, declared recently after a check of comedies at several theaters.

The sustained laugh is the kind for which comedy directors strive. This laugh begins early in the picture. It starts with a low chuckle and swells to a roar of laughter. A situation that seldom fails to elicit a burst of merriment is when the comedian thinks he is safe after being pursued by the villain only to find he isn't, Lord said.

We are now free to say that the point that we are handling is made by the Certain-teed Products Company. Footprints of Prehistoric Monster Embedded in Coal

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Large pieces of coal in which are embedded the footprints of a prehistoric animal believed to be a Tyrannosaurus, the biggest of the carnivorous dinosaurs which roamed the earth millions of years ago, have been found in the Panther coal mine in Carbon county, Utah. The find was made several thousand feet underground. The tyrannosaurus is believed to have been 47 feet long and 15 to 20 feet high when erect, with a tail like a hand.

Runaway Handcar Injures Colleen In "The Desert Flower."

The snip of a scissors in a film editor's hands has saved Colleen Moore, First National star, from added fame as a so-called "stunt" performer.

It happened on a desert stretch near Borstow, Cal. The cameras were whirring merrily as Director Irving Cummings gave the word and Miss Moore culled her part for her role in "The Desert Flower," at the Arcade Wednesday and Thursday, started to pump the handle bars of a handcar and enter the radius of the camera lens.

Waving a greeting to the Mexican section hands, who made way for her as she neared them, Miss Moore sped along the shifting rails bravely. Cummings snatched approvingly and the cameras followed the action.

Just as the director was about to shout "Cut," and complete the scene, the cumbersome handcar entered an area where the track shot into a considerable dip. It gained momentum at an alarming rate and the handle bars were literally wrung from Miss Moore's hands.

The plucky actress grabbed for them to regain her hold, but by that time the speed of the vehicle had so increased that she was hurled skyward.

While the onlookers gasped, Miss Moore turned a complete aerial somersault and landed on the rear of the handcar, registering a perfect expression of flabbergasted incredulity, not to be improved upon by a chorus of a Serrano. Astonish hands soon brought the runaway car to a halt and rescued Miss Moore from her precarious position. And a strained ligament in her neck put her in bed for several weeks, delaying completion of the picture.

Sherrys Showing "Lady of the Night," Society Picture.

No matter in what station of life one lives, emotions remain pretty much the same, according to the thesis of "Lady of the Night," which comes to the Sherry Theatre today.

Monta Bell, director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has brought to the screen a powerful story of society at its highest and lowest levels.

He has filmed the lives of two girls—one at the top, the other at the bottom of the social ladder—who fall in love with the same man.

That it is love of the deepest kind is shown when the spirit of sacrifice moves both of these girls when in the climax they have to choose between what they regard as their happiness and their duty.

Both elect to sacrifice their happiness.

Brilliant social balls, receptions and country club dances set with the lavish hand of wealth are contrasted against the squalid home life of the slums and its only outlet of pleasure—the Bowery dance hall.

And Norma Shearer playing the dual role of Molly, daughter of a convict, and Florence, daughter of the judge who sent her father to prison, is said to give one of the finest performances of her career. She is supported by an exceptional cast, including Malcolm Me...

Gregor, as a young inventor; George K. Arthur, Fred Emmett, Dale Fuller and Betty Morrissey. Miss Shearer's double part calls for something more than is usual in dual roles. For one thing she has to look entirely different, for there is little facial resemblance in the two girls. The picture is made from an original story by Adele Rogers St. John, adapted for the screen by Alice D. G. Miller.

Pear Core Breakdown Causes Heavy Losses

Core breakdown causes heavy losses in stored pears in Oregon unless they are picked at the right time and handled in the right way. Of the various lots under observation at the experiment station in the last seven years, only the late-picked fruit developed the disease to any extent, regardless of the kind of storage.

The later the time of picking the more serious the trouble becomes," says a recent station report prepared by Henry Hartman of the station staff. "The use of the pressure tester to determine time of picking has in many cases eliminated core breakdown entirely."

Pears are often handled poorly by trade and by consumers that even the high class products deteriorate into poor stuff. Although properly grown and handled by the grower, they often go to waste or develop into "sookers," because poorly treated in the ripening period.

Breakdown is characterized by softening and darkening of the core and the fruit about it, even while the outside of the fruit seems perfectly sound. As the disease advances the pear emits a foul odor, often just as the fruit should be approaching its prime condition.

Unlike most fruits, the pear develops its quality only when picked immature, and the big problem of the grower is to determine just the right degree of maturity. Usual maturity signs such as size, color of seed, ease of picking, fruit color, and nature of the bloom are not reliable and a special pressure tester has been developed by the station to aid growers in making their own determination.

Methods of using the tester and handling the fruit are contained in the report issued as station Circular 218, free to residents of Oregon.
