Reginald Barker Films Drama in Arizona Desert.

The great American play—the most popular stage production of the last twenty years—translated to the screen in a production on which no time or expense were spared to make it a film even greater than the original. "The Great Divide" is at Sherry's. It is a Metro-Goldwyn picture, presented by Louis B. Mayer.

The story is of the west of today; of a woman, cultured, educated and with the repression of the East, living among the hardships of the western country.

Critics and public alike have declared it the "great American play."

William Vaughn Moody, who wrote it, originally called it "The Solitary Woman" and indeed it is said he based his story on the history of the Sabine.

Reginald Barker directed "The Great Divide" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It has been done on an elaborate scale and the entire company spent more than six weeks on the desert of Arizona getting excellent scenes.

It is an epic of the West; a powerfully dramatic story of the elemental clash of a woman typical of the repressed culture of the East, and a man typical of the fiery, lawless spirit of the West.

Alice Terry and Conway Tearle have the two leading roles with a supporting cast which includes Wallace Beery, Zasu Pitts, Huntley Gordon, Allan Forrest, Ford Sterling and William Oramond.

Newest Paramount Marriage Comedy Coming to Arcade.

"A Kiss in the Park," a Paramount screen version of the immensely popular stage play, "Aren't We All?" by Frederick Lonsdale, adapted for the screen by Townsend Martin and featuring Adolphe Menjou, Lilian Hitch and Alison Pringle in the leading roles, will be the feature at the Arcade theater opening tomorrow.

The story is a smart carriage comedy of sophisticated society with Menjou in the role of a regular terror with the ladies. As Walter Greatham, in charge of a large sugar plantation in Havana, Menjou becomes engaged to Janet Livingston, played by Miss Pringle. Though he too frequently becomes involved in romantic experiences with other women, Greatham, in his more or less serious moments, has eyes only for Janet. She accepts him on one condition—that he snap out of his philandering ways.

Janet is returning to the States with her friends, the Kings, Betty King, a born flirt, forgets a bag at the last minute, and Menjou gallantly offers to return with her for it. They miss the boat, anyway.

Here is a fine state of affairs, but Betty refuses to become in the least upset. She, on the contrary, rather delights in the situation. At Mayfair's, a Cuban moon, soft music, electric bring about a stolen kiss in the dark. Betty suddenly comes to her senses and leaves. Greatham dolefully reads a wire from Janet ending their engagement on the grounds of his latest fantastic adventure. No one could get here to tell her the story would OXFORD, Eng. (AP)—Not satisfied that credit for the invention of the telescope had been properly placed, the subject has been gone into recently at Oxford with the result that a claim is made "the instrument was invented at Oxford by Englishman, and that the only question to be decided is whether that Englishman was Roger Bacon, or the Elizabethan philosopher, Leonard Digges.

Supporters of the Oxford claim credit Digges with being the "greatest inventor" of the telescope but insist that he did not invent it, nor did the Dutch spectacle makers, who are accorded credit as the first who made the telescope an article of commerce.

In favor of the Oxford claim it is pointed out that in the thirteenth century Roger Bacon wrote: "Glasses or diaphanous bodies may be so formed that the most remote objects may appear just at hand, and the contrary, so that we may read the smallest letters at an incredible distance, and many number of things, though ever so small, may make the stars also appear as near as we please."

However, it is admitted that at this time it is impossible to know whether Bacon actually invented a telescope or merely worked out the theory upon which all magnifying glasses are based.

As to the possibility of Digges, an Oxford man, being the inventor, it is said that in the middle of the 16th century he copied Bacon's ideas in a Bacon manuscript, now lost, and went to work to produce glasses in accordance with them. Digges died young with his work unfinished and it remained for his son, Thomas, to assert the father's claim as an inventor. The son is quoted as saying his father often demonstrated his glasses by sending from a distance the numbers and letters on signs thrown by friends on open fields.

COOLIDGE HAS QUIET DAY
SWAMPSCOTT, Mass. (AP).—President Coolidge spent most of Sunday—the second anniversary of the death of Warren G. Harding, which suddenly elevated him to the presidency—quietly at White Court.

The president remained in the seclusion of the summer White House grounds except for a motor trip to Salem to attend the morning service at the Episcopal Congregational church. He was accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, Senator and Mrs. Pepper of Pennsylvania, who had been overnight guests at White Court, and Frank

Canada in Year Increases
Butter Production 13,000 Tons

OTTAWA, Can. (AP)—Steady increase in butter production in Canada has taken place in recent years, a report of the bureau of statistics showing that 81,000 tons were manufactured in 1924, against 72,000 tons in 1922 and 68,000 tons in 1922. To this, an average of 45,000 tons a year may be added for butter made on the farms and in the homes.

Imports of butter have averaged 1,500 tons annually, the report says, and exports 8,500 tons, while there has been a steady increase in stocks.

Championship Bout Recalled
CARMON CITY, Nev. (AP)—The going used at the world championship heavyweight prizefight here March 17, 1897, when Jim Corbett lost the title to Bob Fitzsimmons, has been given by Mrs. Sadie Manton to her son, a resident of Texas, whose father was one of Corbett's trainers. Mrs. Manton purchased the old bell from Andrew Todd, Sr., of Carson City, who has had it in his possession since the day of the battle.

So many people are asking us how we can sell building material so reasonable and at the same time succeed in making a profit. First, we buy from large mills that are anxious to move their stock. Sometimes we buy first-class material for half price and less. For instance, we are selling moulded clear barn batts for 60c per hundred running feet. The main company that we are dealing with are millionaires. They make a specialty of box car material and cross-ties for the large telegraph and telephone company, and they get out millions of feet of this material that demand a good price; consequently their building material line, they are willing to move at greatly reduced prices. Second, our overhead is extremely low, as I told you before we milk a Jersey cow. Third, come and see for yourself.
