Prehistoric Reservoirs Found in Nevada Valley

GOLD HILL, Utah, (AP).—A series of six immense reservoirs believed to have been constructed about 50,000 years ago have been discovered in Spring Valley, Nevada, by members of the Cosmographic society.

The reservoirs are triangular and range from a few feet to 60 feet in depth. The retaining walls are about 500 yards long and are feathered back into the bluffs. The walls are from 6 to 25 feet thick and are believed to be composed of granite, covered with debris.

The huge tanks overlook a once fertile valley, whose soil deposits have since been found. It is thought by members of the society that the reservoirs were used for irrigation purposes.

Claims that the reservoirs resulted from glacial action have been denied by the Cosmographic society, which points out that no trace of a glacier could be traced in the perfectly symmetrical masonry formations.

In a limestone cave in the mountainside above the reservoirs members of the Smithsonian Institution found several crude implements and weapons, among which were several "arrow springs," a little wooden rod with one end bent into a hook. The arrow was placed into the crook and the rod sprung after the fashion of the catapult. The "arrow spring" is considered to have preceded the bow by several hundred years.

"Racing for Life" At Sherrys Today and Tomorrow.

Every boy has an ambition all his own from the earliest days of adolescence and cherishes the hope that some day, by grace of some miraculous turn, that ambition would meet the light of day.

In the case of William Fairbanks who stars opposite Eva Novak in "Racing for Life" at the Sherry Theatre beginning today, his boyhood ambition had to wait until his masterful motion picture acting endeared him to a large public.

Why, it has just backed out that William got into no little mess as a boy because of his courageous dabbling in auto racing. He learned the mechanics of the game very early and sought many a time to perfect some devices of his own mind which would bring him a speed championship.

In "Racing for Life," although only in the motion pictures, William comes to the full realization of his earliest ambition, and performs it in a most spirited manner because of his love for the game. He races against Ralph De Palma, Murray speed king, and one named Murray, who is a daredevil in his own way, and triumphs after a thrilling struggle.

William surprised his friends and co-workers at the studio recently by confessing that he never enjoyed his work so much as in making "Racing for Life."

The supporting cast includes such able screen players as Philo McCullough, Wilfred Lucas, Little Frankie Barro and many others.

Great Cast Gathered In Barthelms Film—"Soul Fire."

Richard Barthelms, whose latest first National drama, "Soul Fire," comes to the Arcade Theatre on Friday, has always maintained a splendid standard of production.

Barthelms believes, too, in having distinguished leading men. In the past he has had such well known players as Dorothy Mackall, Dorothy Gish, May McAvoy, Pauline Garon, Louise Huff, Mary Astor and Gladys Hulette in the principal feminine roles of his productions.

Many prominent men have appeared in the casts of his pictures as well. William Powell made his first hit in "The Bright Shores" with Barthelms. Ernest Torrence was given his very first screen role by Barthelms in "Behind David's" 1p to that time Torrence was known only as a Scotch comedian in musical comedy.

In "Soul Fire" Barthelms has the support of three well known players in the three distinct parts of this picturesque romance of a young musical genius. In the first episode, laid in Italy and France, Galetta Monterey, a famous young actress of the speaking stage, makes her film debut. Miss Monterey is looked upon as another Nina Gold, and her entrance into pictures will be watched with high interest.

In the second episode, laid in Port Said, Barthelms has the stage star, Helen Ware in the principal feminine role.

Bessie Love is seen in the third and final sequence, laid in the South Seas. The role of Tola in this portion of "Soul Fire" furnishes this brilliant young actress with the best role of her career.

LONDON (AP).—The turtle as a household pet here is threatening the canary, the cat and the poodle. Nearly every household in London has a turtle or two in his back yard, or "garden" as it is called in England.

Turtles this summer have been sold by hawkers, in the markets and in many stores which formerly confined themselves to goldfish, birds and dogs. The price has been from six pence up to three and four shillings, according to size. It has been estimated by dealers that within the last few weeks there have been approximately 60,000 turtles brought to England from Mediterranean ports, while London has received numerous other supplies from the continent.

Most gardeners in the city and suburbs have turtles in their allotments, the theory being that they consume the snails and other pests which do harm to tender, growing plants. Turtle fanciers contend that turtles are most grateful creatures for any kindness, and that they are very faithful pets so long as a person is kind to them. After being released in a garden and given a few draughts of sweetened water at first, the turtle makes himself perfectly at home, among the vegetables and flowers, and will seldom stray beyond his own confines even though there is no fence.

TOKYO (AP).—The effects of the great earthquake and fire of 1923 are still being felt by the children of Tokyo. Investigators of the Child Welfare Section of the Tokyo Municipality report that more than 50 percent of the children under seven years of age in the slum quarters have been found to be unhealthy either because of under nourishment or diseases of various kinds. There is every indication, says the report, that the situation will become worse unless immediate steps are taken to care for the homeless in the poorer sections of the city.

"The most immediate cause of the unhealthy conditions of the children," said Eisatsu Okazaki, head of the Child Welfare Section, "is the fact that they have not been fed so well as they were the following the great earthquake. This was especially the case during the period when the city was beginning to be rebuilt. Just before that, the children in the slum districts had been fairly well fed with supplies sent to them by relief organization all over the world. Later, however, many poor families were thrown on their own resources. In addition, the present employment situation, which has led to an almost total lack of work for wives of laborers, has still further depleted the incomes of the poor families."

"Another cause of the poor health of the children, is that they have been forced to play in the ruins of Honjo and Fukagawa, and much of what seems sand and solid ground is in reality nothing but the ashes of the buildings in those suburbs. All green growing things in these districts had been destroyed by the fire and the wind raises the dust for the children to breathe."

Tokio's Poor Children Lack Proper Nutrition

TACOMA, Wash. (AP).—Luther T. White, superintendent of federal prisons, when here recently to inspect McNeil Island penitentiary, said federal prisons should be made more heavily self-supporting. He pointed out that the federal prison population had increased largely in recent years, and that the burden on the taxpayers could be alleviated by the establishment of proper industries.

He announced that a cannery plant would be put up at McNeil Island and that the prisoners would raise and run enough vegetables to supply themselves and other government institutions. He added that the prisoners would receive some money for their work and would be taught useful trades as far as possible.

Santa Claus Late in Fair North (PORT SMITHSON, Northwest Territory (AP).—Residents of this far north post recently had a second Christmas celebration. The first mail boat of the season, the Pioneer, arrived bearing 42 mail pouches from "outside." It was the first "mail" since last fall. Though six months late, the packages provided a gala event for the white settlers.

War Vets Drifts Ashore

FORT CAVALIER, Glamorgan, Wales (AP).—Attached to some wrecks, a brass plate has been washed ashore here which belonged to the American coast guard cutter Tampa. The Tampa, with heavy loss of life, was sunk by a German submarine in British waters, September, 1918.

Fire are Walter Long, Harriet Sterling, Ida Toss, Effie Shannon, Len Baker, Gus Weinberg, and George Painesfort.
