LARGE CROWD AT CONCERT: BAND SCORES

Too heavy with here and there a more difficult selection interpolated to add interest. The concert opened with a march, "Warner," by Tschaikovsky. This first number was followed by an overture, "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna," which was with the descriptive title, "The Mill in the Forest" by Bilseburg, composed the most difficult section of the program. For an encore to "Morning, Noon and Night" the band played "Mime Night," a popular number of the more melodious variety. "The Dawn of Love" by Bendix and a popular piece, "Don't Bring Lulu" and scenes from "The Times of Normandy" by Planchette preceded the "Mill in the Forest."

Mrs. Fiske Campaigns Against Steel Traps

CHICAGO, (AP)—The steel trap, to Mrs. Mimmie Maddern Fiske, the actress, is the most efficient instrument of arrest that man has ever invented by his human mind. Mrs. Fiske is now on a campaign against the steel trap. She will visit many leading cities and will personally meet the women, not for the purpose of discouraging the wearing of furs but with the object of outlawing the steel trap in the fur industry. Mrs. Fiske for more than 25 years has been actively interested in anti-fur work. She believes that if American women knew the inside story of trapping and the subsequent tortures, public opinion would stop the manufacture of the instrument. The human race is in error of physical agony and spiritual millions of dollars a year in resources to conquer pain. Mrs. Fiske said, "The scientists who discoverer since new methods to reduce pain is acclaimed a world hero, yet we are made to wear the animals which feel almost as we feel. The steel trap has no place in civilization and we hope to awaken in the modern woman to the shame and horror and degradation of it. When women know how furs are obtained they will band themselves and refuse to purchase or wear furs procured by the steel trap."

Barbara Cartland, popular London society girl, recently became famous through the successful publication of her first novel.

The commission has reached an agreement for the purchase of a 200-foot strip one and three-quarters miles long along the Wallowa river between Minam and Wallowa. The object is to preserve for all time the scenic beauty of the place. The timber would be removed if it remained in private hands.

Prospects for the construction of the bridge over the Snake river near Ballard's landing are rather slim, Judge Doby thinks. He appropriated $25,000 for half of the bridge and Oregon appropriated $125,000 for a quarter of it, Baker county to furnish the rest. The difficulty is that $50,000 will not begin to build a suitable bridge. The one at Ontario cost $149,999. So the matter is dead until money is sufficient quantity is made available.

Bonds totaling $700,000 will be paid off this year and more will be paid off next year. The amount to be retired will increase each year so that the state will not have money out of current income for new construction much longer. The state has been authorized to issue $5,500,000 more bonds than have actually been issued, but there is no intention of issuing more bonds in the near future, and not at all if it can be avoided.

Two weeks ago Thursday night, less than four hours before he was to walk on the death trap, he again was saved from the noose by a petition filed before Judge Joseph B. David, at 2 o'clock in the morning declaring him to be insane.

Scott sat tensely in his chair while the jury filed into the box. He turned eagerly to the foreman when he announced to the court that a verdict was ready and as the balliff passed to the clerk, Scott's eyes followed the slip of paper that might mean life or death.

When the verdict was read Scott's mouth twitched nervously and he shifted his position in the chair. He sat motionless at the side of his attorney while the court entered the judgment on the verdict and then was hurried out of the room as the balliff adjourned the session.

Mrs. Catherine Scott, the young wife of the prisoner, whose dainty face peeked shyly from behind the gallery, buried forward in an attitude of prayer after the verdict was read. Scott's mother, who was at his side, wept and embraced Scott's wife while Thomas Scott, his aged and crippled father, who celebrated his 83rd birthday on a day Scott was sentenced to hang, stayed close to his son in court but received the verdict without show of emotion.

Scott, while going to the asylum as insane, still faces death on the gallows should he ever be found to have regained his sanity.

Much work has been done at the station in connection with sheep raising in general and lamb feeding as a means of marketing hay. The work here has been supplemented by much carried on at the Hermiston station. Farm flocks are on the increase, and are making good profits for the owners.

New pasture experiments were viewed where different mixtures are subjected to practical uses, amounting to about 100 acres given with sheep kept on them.

One of the most extensive fertilizer trials in the state was shown the inspecting party. Five crops are being grown in combination rotation and yields are obtained for each crop under 12 different fertilizer treatments. Several years' data are already available.

Soil in this locality has been found to be the only one in the state on which gypsum or calcium sulfate has been found to give better returns over a period of years than sulfur alone. Recent tests made by the soils department at the home station suggest an explanation for this. It is reported that most of the soil that was formerly sold as raw land shows a moderate acid reaction in the untreated state. It was found that acidity was decreased with the continued use of sulfur. The main increase from gypsum came when used with sulfur crops.

As most of the 1,000,000 of the soil is raised in eastern Oregon, this station was selected as the one at which to do everything possible HEALTH (By Dr. Frederick Stricker) It has been said that to become a mother is more dangerous than to be a soldier in a front-line trench. While this is something of an exaggeration (particularly in states like Oregon, where the people live under good conditions), it does remind us that motherhood is a much more dangerous undertaking than it has any right to be.

During the same year, 825 infants died. Many of them could have been saved if their mothers had made a better understanding of their care, especially during sickness. Education of mothers and mothers-to-be would save many lives—both their own and their children's. For this reason, the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the prospective mothers, which are sent monthly before the baby comes, and for four months thereafter.

These letters take up, in a simple way, the things a mother should know and should do to prepare for the baby's coming. They advise her of the precautions she should take at various times, and what danger signals to look for. They tell her how to go about conserving her health, and that of her unborn child.

A selection of the best pamphlets and literature available on various subjects connected with the letters is sent out with the letters. There is no cost whatever connected with this service.

To help solve the problems of the stockmen, as all of some counties and others in eastern Oregon ship out nothing in the way of agricultural products except livestock, the importance of recognizing this industry in the work of an important branch station is apparent.

Steer Tests On. Tests with growing steers show that they may be brought to good marketable condition at two and a half years old and yet be wintered on but a half ration of hay. These findings have been especially significant, reports show, in some counties where the total hay production allows only two-thirds of a ton of hay for each head of cattle.

Another important experiment is that with calves and yearlings in which it was shown that these may be wintered successfully on straw supplemented with one pound of cottonseed cake and one pound of linseed cake per head of calves and a half pound of linseed cake per head of yearlings. Tests with fattening steers on hay, peas, and barley silage, or sunflower silage showed possibilities of utilizing these feeds in the higher altitudes of the Baker, Union, Redmond, Prineville, Lakeview and Knappa Falls districts.

The raising has received considerable attention at the station. It is shown, and a method has been worked out whereby it is possible with the use of self-feeders and alfalfa pasture to get hogs to market in August and September when the prices are high.

Sheep Mrs. Ailed. Much work has been done at the station in connection with sheep raising in general and lamb feeding as a means of marketing hay. The work here has been supplemented by much carried on at the Hermiston station. Farm flocks are on the increase, and are making good profits for the owners.

For late it has been shown here and at Hermiston that lambs if not too large may be wintered profitably on alfalfa hay alone; the normal rise in prices which reach their peak in March and April giving the return for the hay. They will not fatten on that ration, it was shown, but will hold their own, consuming about 70 pounds of hay a month per head. With a grain ration of one pound per head per day added 75 days before marketing time, lambs may be marketed in March and April.
