CHICAGO (AP)—Professional activities rather than the dictum of any economical factors, dictated the price movement of wheat during the most part of Tuesday's session, due to the continued lack of outside interest, closing quotations for wheat were 1/2 to 2/8 net lower, September at $1.57 1/2 to $1.57 3/4; December at $1.57 1/2 to $1.57 3/4, with corn ranging from 1/2 to 1/4 up, oats at a shade to 1/2c gain and provisions 15 to 27c lower.

The extraordinary decrease in the visible supply Monday exerted a steady influence at the opening and during the earlier trading. The buying by the eastern and the selling by a leading Chicago operator also served to keep the market within rather narrow limits earlier in the day. As the session grew older, local professional concentration on the September delivery, while the southeast extended strong support. The local faction appeared more confident, however, and ran to cover when reports from the east and from St. Louis told of improved export demand.

Prices then advanced substantially for a short interval but the easterners appeared to accept their gains and values receded. Toward the close the market was again pressing the local while the eastern continent seemed to have withdrawn much of its support.

Coarse grains exhibited independent strength, corn finishing with a gain, oats averaged higher during the greater part of the session.

Scattered liquidation through commission houses carried provisions downward.

INDIANS GET RATTLED FOR BIG SNAKE DANCE

WINSTON, Ark. (AP)—Their three-day hunt completed, during which they romped up and captured every available rattlesnake in the vicinity of their reservation, preliminaries for the annual snake dance of the Hopi Indians got under way in earnest at Walpi, their village near here, Tuesday.

The snake dance will take place Wednesday and tourists from all over the United States are gathering to watch the spectacle. Monday the priests made innumerable "prayer sticks" and Tuesday they were preparing charm paints and emittes. The Hopis are visited frequently by the rattlesnakes during the ceremony, since they handle the reptiles without restraint, but no Indian has ever been known to die from a reptile's poison. The preparation used by the Hopis to counteract the poison never has been made known to the white man.

Finally the prayers of the tribes are bestowed upon them, following the washing and sprinkling of the snakes with sacred meal, and they are hurried loose to carry the benediction to the "snake mother" and to the "spider woman of the underworld."

held on hostages to the convicts by the four men were kidnapped by the murderers of Monitor Murray to the effect that Tom Murray and James Wilcox had deserted Elsworth Kelly, the third member of the trio, was given credence by many of the authorities who thought such action likely. The opinions are based on remarks made by the convicts during the time they were in company with their hostages.

PORTLAND (By the Associated Press)—A telephone message from a man who declared he was Tom Murray, leader of the three fugitive convicts, denying the truth of the published story that he and his companions had separated was received today by a local afternoon newspaper. "We are all together in Portland," was the substance of the message. Efforts to trace the call were unavailing. The police are uncertain whether to regard the call as a hoax or a definite warning from the convicts. Some officers, calling attention to Murray's love for the dramatic, believe the message genuine. Search for the convicts, here continuing with the police running down "hot tips" which lead to nothing.

TACOMA (By the Associated Press)—Local police were notified today that three men believed to have been the fugitive Oregon convicts had fired on a truck to the north of Centralia at midnight last night. The Centralia office reported that Charles Taylor, a truck driver for a telephone firm, noticed a parked roadster by the side of an oil station while en route to Chehalis. As he slowed down three men who he said resembled very closely the newspaper descriptions of the three men. One of the trio in the roadster, apparently thinking the truck was stopping, shot at the driver, the bullet penetrating the windshield. Taylor sped up and saw the roadster drive north.

Among improvements contemplated are better protection for the prison arsenal, a new guard tower near the main gate and the installation of a web of high voltage electric wires below the ceilings in several tiers of cells.
