weather," says Mr. Collins. "Prospects for a world leader of a show are bright. To say things look good is putting it mildly."

Bring Own Hands

The various aggregations coming here bring their own hands and they are all well known in track and arena circles. All will be here at least a week before Round-Up. Mr. Collins, with Chauncy Bishop, John Bamley, Dr. H. H. Hartley and Sol Babin made up the Portland representation at the Salt Lake show last week. All speak highly of the show and of the hospitality shown. Mr. Collins was especially impressed with the announcing system used and the management hopes that it can be duplicated here.

At the Salt Lake show Norman Cowman won the bucking, and Bob Crosby the calf and steer roping, and the bulldogging.

The entire exterior of the building will be finished with new plate glass windows on Elm street.

Sanitation Plays Big Part In Eradicating Bovine T.B.

Through the influence of sanitation surrounding in preventing disease is widely recognized, the very direct part it plays in illustrating almost daily in the most important lines of this work is the eradication of tuberculosis from livestock. Owing to the systematic manner in which the testing is conducted, together with records of infected herds, definite records now take the place of casual observations.

In one herd tested annually for a period of three years, each test disclosed at least two tuberculous animals. The premises and stable were in such condition that thorough disinfection was virtually impossible, and rather than improve conditions the owner finally quit the dairy business. In contrast to this experience are scores of cases in which infected herds, kept in sanitary barns, are soon freed of tuberculosis and kept so for long periods.

One of the most striking examples reported to the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, was that of an eastern dairyman who had a excellent herd which he kept in a very old barn which he had numbered between 39 and 40 animals, mostly purebred, and the owner paid several thousand dollars a piece for some of his prize cows. This was some years ago when public enlightenment concerning tuberculosis was just beginning. Frequent deaths occurred in the herd and finally the dairyman decided to have his cattle tuberculosis tested. His first test showed a large proportion of reactors, and later tests look still more ominous, that infection was being spread from the farm to the city, representing years of breeding work and a large investment was practically wiped out. The cost of a few good cows used in the construction of a modern, sanitary barn would have protected the large investment in the herd and prevented the inroads of the disease.

So important is the sanitary condition among which cattle are kept with relation to their health, that the United States Department of Agriculture now pays Federal indemnity for tuberculous stock only after the premises have been properly disinfected. This is a new ruling based on an interpretation of Federal laws and regulations and on many of the State laws. A thorough clean up is necessary, as routine, before disinfection can be properly performed.

The ruling is expected to be helpful in reducing the number of reactors found on tests of infected herds. Unless disinfection is promptly and thoroughly done following the removal of tuberculous cattle from a farm, there is serious danger of continued herding infection which may mean more reactors to pay for at a later time. Good practice is contrary to such a practice and the program of Federal economy.

Practical livestock sanitation includes such matters as good drainage, removal of manure at frequent intervals, foundations of concrete or other material that does not rot or harbor infection, good light and ventilation, and smooth walls, floors and ceilings that can be easily cleaned and disinfected. The trend of progress is plainly in the direction of better care and housing of farm livestock, since sanitation pays both in business, way and from a health standpoint. But in spite of the excellent progress already made, department officials point out that there is abundant opportunity for more attention to this important subject.

CAMPING OUTFIT STOLEN.
CANYON, Ore.—After Mrs. J. M. Dittin of New Era had packed her camping outfit and locked it in the barn preparatory to starting for the mountains, things broke into the building during the night and stole everything, including guns, ammunition, tent blankets, etc.

The case was reported to oficers but no trace of the thieves has been found.

LABOR DEMAND IS INCREASING

PORTLAND (Special)—Calls for hop pickers began to appear on employment boards last week, demands for construction workers and harvest hands did not abate and the reopening several logging camps resulted in more than 400 loggers returning to camps, according to the 4L weekly employment service letter issued here today. A slight surplus of men was reported from only two districts of the west coast and nowhere in the Inland Empire is the number of men equal to jobs offered.

Reports from the various 4L offices were as follows:
Medford.—Although the fruit season is in full swing in this district there is a surplus of help for all kinds of work.

Portland.—The sawmill at Prescott on the Columbia river resumed cutting last week after being down since early July, and the Wheeler Bay Lumber company's mill at Redport will reopen this week. It is reported, logging activity remains unabated from last week. Jobs listed on local employment boards are chiefly for hop pickers, rigging men, construction laborers and concrete workers. Not many idle men in this city.
