MOTHER STARTS SON ON WAY TO GOLFING CROWN

OKLAHOMA CITY, (AP)—The companionship of a boy and his mother opened the way to the winning of the 1925 Western amateur golf championship.

When Kevie Carter, 13-year-old holder of this year's title, was 12 years old, his mother, Mrs. Dorset Carter, was ordered by her physician to seek outdoor exercise. She took up golf and Kevie went with her in all she played around the house.

Soon Mrs. Carter developed a fondness for the game and her enthusiasm moved the boy to take a try at it. They played daily and within a short time young Carter was displaying something more than ordinary form for a boy of his age and strength.

But Kevie was not in robust health, and his physician advised him to stop golf, quit school and devote his time to his golf. He did not touch a golf club, but when he was again permitted to return to the links, the mother was awaiting him with a lot of new golfing ideas.

The boy soon showed that his long illness had not spoiled his form. Sandy Baxie, a local professional, asked to young Carter's ability and took him in charge.

Carter got his first tournament experience in state titular contests in 1922. He qualified in Class D, and went through to the finals. A short time later he reached the finals in the state junior championship. The next year he made the tournament, but in the second round of match play he went down before Bill Nichols of Muskogee.

Last year Carter won the state title. In the semi-finals he defeated Nichols, who avenged the defeat this year, taking Carter's measure in the finals. It went to 47 holes.

Carter's success in the Western tournament came on his second entry. Last year at Chicago he qualified, but was eliminated in the first round.

SERVICE STATION ROBBED

HOOD RIVER, Ore. (Special)—Two men, masked with handkerchiefs, held up the Wynch service station of F. W. Chindum, located on the Columbia highway, making Mr. Chindum hand them $47 from his till.

Mrs. Chindum in the back room had secured a shotgun. One of the robbers, attracted by the noise made when she pumped a shell from the magazine, covered her with his revolver before she could fire.

CARNIVALS IN BAKER SCORED

BAKER, Ore. (Special)—At a lively meeting of the chamber of commerce yesterday the "carnival question" introduced by J. P. Lottridge drew fire from every quarter. Mr. Lottridge stated that while the Eastern Oregon Light & Power company profited from the carnival last week, he believed it had influence for the town. When he asked for opinions of other members, L. C. Brown, Robert Walburn, William Smith and Louis Levisner spoke against the street shows.

Mr. Levisner declared for a prohibitive license and the suppression of some of the more played at carnivals. Dr. C. E. Wiggins affirmed that the state law against gambling was being flagrantly violated. Chas. Shelton held that questionable games should be prohibited, but that reasonable license fees should be charged.

E. H. Curney maintained that while amusement is necessary for a city, carnivals do more harm than good.

On motion of Mr. Lottridge, it was decided to name a committee to study the matter and report at a later meeting.

And in Germany, motorcycles are becoming popular with motorists. Love's blind here. Maybe it's deaf there.
