New York Man Gives Traveling Scholarships to British Tutors

LONDON, (AP) — Scholarships which each year will permit three British elementary school teachers to travel about in the United States for six months or more have been established by Irving T. Bush, New York businessman. Each scholarship has a value of $1,500. The recipients will be selected by the authorities in charge of the City of London vacation course.

The first three holders of these new scholarships probably will leave for America early in 1926. They will tour as much of the country as possible, visiting schools delivering lectures and keeping their eyes and ears open for American methods and manners that might recommend themselves for transplanting into British educational soil.

Suffered 18 years--Cured in 2 Months

"I had suffered for 18 years with PILES. My doctors said a surgical operation was absolutely necessary. Yet after a few treatments by Dr. Dean I was well, gaining weight and strength; free from all nervous troubles."

German Scientists Obtain Data on Deep-Sea Currents

HAMBURG, (AP)—A scientific deep-sea expedition which left Hamburg in April recently arrived at Cape Town after a successful cruise. The expedition traversed the Atlantic between America and Africa 14 times and succeeded in studying scientifically submarine currents. The claim is made that this is the first time this has been accomplished. Reports from the expedition declared that its investigation proved that warm currents from the North Atlantic flow at a considerable depth for a distance of about 2,000 miles south of the equator where they rise to the surface. Similar currents from the southern Polar regions pass northward.

The waters of these currents were found to contain such forms of organic food as is sought by whales and certain other wish. The expedition, financed entirely by private subscription, is in charge of Dr. Merz, director of the Berlin Institute of Oceanography. It will proceed to the southern Polar regions, making Bouvet Island its base and sailing eastward from there.

Women Help Retard Enlishments In Territorial Army, Says Briton

LONDON, (AP)—The Territorial army is not being kept up to its establishment strength because of "women, trade unions and motor-bicycles," said Lord Raglan in the House of Lords recently. He declared that young men were not joining the Territorials in sufficient numbers and the causes mentioned had been "enemies" of the Territorial army since the war.

Woman's he said, did not want their husbands and sweethearts to join, and while the young man of pre-war days found the Territorial army one way of getting off into the country, today he uses a motor-bicycle.

MAN FASTS 70 DAYS

BUDAPEST, (AP) — Another long-distance food abstainer has been found here in the person of Bela Vlesey, who existed for 70 days without food of any kind and and with only a few sips of water every day. He then started on a lecture and propaganda tour with the object of making converts to his sect.

Last Showing of "Breed of the Border" At Sherrys Tonight.

The terrific, stifling heat of Death Valley, and the terrible toll the desert takes of the men brave enough to dare its hazards in their search for gold is vividly shown in "Breed of the Border," the third picture starring Lefty Flynn at Sherrys.

The "Purgatory Sink" location which plays a prominent part in this stirring tale was actually shot in the famous Death Valley, the center of the dreaded Mojave desert. Fortunately for the Harry Garson company it was not necessary to take the women into Death Valley, as the action in "Purgatory Sink" lies entirely between Lefty Flynn and the heavy; and when the company returned to Los Angeles the star insisted that the heat was so terrible that no woman could have safely withstood the hardships of the trip. Dorothy Dwan supports the dynamic Mr. Flynn in this picture. Others in the cast are Louise Carver, Frank Hagney, Millen Ross, Joe Bennett, Fred Burns and Bill Donovan.

Comedy showing, Stan Laurel in "Monsieur Don't Care."

"The Deadwood Coach" Filmed in The Band Lands.

It was Tom Mix himself who suggested that "The Deadwood Coach" be filmed among the Bad Lands of South Dakota. Tom had heard much of that country and saw it in tremendous possibilities as a background for a picture—especially the sort of picture which involves stunt riding and daring plunges over precipices.

At first Director Lynn Reynolds failed to see the wisdom of going so far for a location. "What's the matter with Frijoles Canyon right here in California?" he inquired. "We can get all the wild country we need right around here, and we can also get our people and supplies to it without all the grief."

But Tom was set on the Bad Lands. A long time ago when he served in the Spanish-American war with Colonel Roosevelt's "Rough Riders," he had heard of the adventures of his chief during hunting expeditions into that country. He had heard of bear and bison that hid among the caves and crags up there, and had determined to explore the region to his heart's content at some later date.

The years went by, and the opportunity never came, for the first Mix picture filmed proclaimed the big ranchman as king of all cowboys, and other pictures followed thick and fast in its wake. Other responsibilities came, too—a family and a ranch in Arizona which needed attention in the few breathing spaces allowed between pictures.

And so it happened that Tom Mix never saw the South Dakota Bad Lands until he stood at the edge of a rock ledge and looked across them a few months ago. Director Reynolds stood beside him, and they both were very silent. Even Tony, who stood gazing out at them over his master's shoulder, seemed under the spell.

Reynolds spoke first. "This is the real thing," he said. "If that mass of rock photographs only one-tenth as wonderful as it looks, we'll have a picture that's a marvel just from its background alone."

"It looks to me," said Tom, "like a better place than the Grand Canyon to get rid of used razor blades."

And so it was decided, and the company was chosen and sent down to start work. The finished picture has been considered a photographic triumph, and, more important than that to Mix fans, it has been pronounced the most daring and thoroughly thrilling film Tom has ever turned out. In fact, the results were so entirely satisfactory that the Bad Lands are being seriously considered as a permanent location for Mix productions.

"The Deadwood Coach" opens at the Star today.

Lumberjacks Act In New Thriller At Arcade.

Earl Hudson stopped at nothing to get realism and genuine thrills into his first National picture, "The Knockout," which comes today to the Arcade theater, starring Milton Sills.

In order to obtain the correct atmosphere for the outdoor scenes of this picture of the Canadian woods he sent his company into the wilds of Northern Ontario and Quebec. The location of the picture was in the vicinity of the Ottawa river, the center of the largest lumbering activities in the eastern section of the country.

That the scenes might be true to life and depict the perilous task of the river drivers who bring millions of logs each year from the forests to the sawmills, Hudson, through the co-operation of the Canadian government, engaged the whole crew of one of the largest woods operators as actors in the picture.

"The Knockout" is a film filled with stirring action of the sort for which Sills has become famous. He is a prize fighter who goes to the logging camps of the north woods when he finds his right arm has gone back on him. There he meets opposition and action that make his ring efforts seem soft.

Sills battles his way against men of a type rarely seen in such numbers on the screen. He is surrounded by a band of physical giants. His principal fight is with John Philip Kolb, who stands six feet seven inches and weighs two hundred and fifty pounds. A dozen real lumberjacks, picked for their huge stature, were taken along for other action scenes, and at every turn the big, hairy, rough Canadians are in the background.

"The Knockout" is a screen version of M. D. C. Crawford's stirring novel, "The Comeback." The supporting cast includes Lorna Duveen, Jed Prouty, John Philip Kolb, Claude King, Harlan Knight and others. Lambert Hillyer directed.

In May, 1926, investigators in several countries will make daily ascents to study the upper air.

Presidential Palace at Times Was Like Prison to Ebert

BERLIN, (AP)—The late Friedrick Ebert did not always feel exalted in his position as president of the German Republic. An incident illustrating how the president felt at times is related in the diaries and memoirs of the late Minna Cauer, woman leader.

While visiting the president, Mr. Ebert complained that he never was able, in his position, to follow his own inclination, that he never could get away from himself.

"Circumspection, calmness and moderation in all things are the obligations my position entails," he said.

"How do you feel, Mr. President, when you look back into the past from your splendid executive mansion and this beautiful park?" Minna Cauer asked.

"As in a prison," the first German president replied, in a voice charged with emotion.
