ILLINOIS TAKES PRIDE IN GOVERNORS' ART GALLERIES

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—When some artistic Illinois legislators years ago introduced a bill to appropriate money for an art gallery of the first Illinois governor he set a precedent which gave this state another first place among the forty-eight.

Thomas H. Stevenson, artist of Philadelphia, who has just finished reconditioning the portraits of Illinois' governors, said that no other state but Illinois has a complete set of life portraits of its governor.

Mr. Stevenson placed Illinois first in this respect because some cultured legislators "knew the value of art paintings," "other states," he said, "have some fine pictures of governors, including Maryland, and the most complete set of colonial governors' portraits hangs in Independence Hall in Philadelphia, but no other state approaches Illinois in the degree of excellence in completion of its executive portrait gallery."

A conservative estimate of the value of the gallery, Mr. Stevenson said, would be about $50,000. Among the finest examples of portrait painting in the lot, he said, is that of Governor Shelby M. Cullom, done by G. P. A. Healy and worth $2,000. Those portraits all hang in the governor's office and in the private office in the picture of Patrick Henry, an early official of this state, while it was yet a part of Virginia.

man-licks company employed 1,200 men. Adding those those together one gets a total number of men employed by three concerns as 2,250. Of course, a goodly share of the 1,200 men in the employ of the Hosianna-Hicks company are at Maxville and Wallawa but, subtracting that amount, and adding the approximate number employed in other industries here, one gets a figure of 2,500, which represents nearly 25 per cent of the city's population.

Added to these figures is the assurance that the three large lumber companies and the railroad division point will remain in La Grande indefinitely, preventing La Grande from assuming a non-subsistent boom period but rather, giving the city and surrounding community a continuous growth and promise of greater things for the future.

ment among the hunters who think there is no sport in the world to equal it. The thrill of waiting in a blind to see a flock of mallards splash down from the skies is one that is dissimilar to any other sensation.

The duck hunters will have to wait until the first of October to begin shooting but then they have a long time for the birds are not closed until January 15th.

The limit on ducks is 25 a day and on geese eight a day and 25 a week.

MITCHELL DENOUNCES AIR POLICY

stationed every 200 miles were entirely too far apart. He declared the recent fleet maneuvers in the Pacific were nothing but a parade of the navy, costing from 50 to 300 million dollars.

"Battle Fleet Joy Riding," Mitchell said the battle fleet should have been used as a patrol in the Honolulu airplane flight instead of joy riding around the antipodes. He said the airplanes should have been refueled from the air.

Mitchell also said "the airman and his staff and his staff, they dare not tell the truth, knowing far well they will be deprived of their career and sent to the most out of way places to prevent their telling the truth and deprived of all chances for advancement unless they subscribed to the dictates of their non-flying bureaucratic superiors."

Mitchell asserted the conduct of the war and navy departments has been "so disgusting in the last few years as to make any self respecting officer ashamed of the cloth he wears."

"MOTHER, PIN A ROSE ON ME," and she did, and every day of the 57 years since, Robert Dundas Colquhoun, Mechanics Library, San Francisco, has had one pinned on his coat lapel. His grand total of roses is 29,821.

Philadelphia Seeking Really Clever Police

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Brains more than physical prowess, will be sought hereafter in recruits for the Philadelphia police department, under a recent ruling of the civil service commission. The decision, announced after investigations by the commission and Director of Public Safety Bradley D. Butler, will become effective with the next batch of candidates.

Criminals are keen-witted and quick-thinking policemen are needed to keep abreast of them, the commission said. A new code of tests for prospective blue-coats will be put into practice, designed as far as practicable, to "predict the efficiency of a policeman."

Under the old system a candidate was given three points for physical qualification, three for training and experience, and one each for practical questions, observation and personal interview.

The revised code will rank physical qualifications at two points; training and experience, two and one-half; practical questions, two; personal interview two and one-half.

Most important, the new code will measure the prospective policeman's thinking ability. Hypothetical situations will be sketched and the candidate asked to state his actions under each condition. He will be graded accordingly.

Let's be real quiet about it and maybe this winter will slip by without a crossword puzzle craze.
