POVERTY FACES EX-FILM STARS

give up the fight and is working as an extra in pictures here.

Marguerite Clark, once as noted in the film world as Mary Pickford, and Mary Charleston, star of the old Vitagraph company, now are happily married. The former is the wife of Harry Williams of New Orleans, and the latter married Henry B. Walthall, the actor.

"I have found more happiness in my home than I ever could have found in the vain glory of seeking personal fame," says Mrs. Walthall.

"We are happy."

And Mrs. Williams wires: "We are happy and that means everything in the world."

Years ago Ella Hall was the "child wonder" of the movie lots. She deserted the screen to marry Rivers Johnson, a director. She became the mother of three children and after some time came to her husband, he deserted her, according to her divorce complaint at Los Angeles.

Nine years ago, Mary Fuller, only a star, suddenly disappeared. It was as though some gulf of obscurity had drowned her. Only recently was the widow Mary found living in seclusion with her mother in a Washington, D. C. suburb.

"I ran away from it all, because I thought I had gone as far as I could," she says.

Mabel Trunnelle, another is-gone-tomorrow, is now Mrs. Herbert Prior, wife of an actor.

Others Take Fall

There are countless others who have taken their bows in the abyss of obscurity.

Where are the rest of those stars of yesterday who thrilled the hearts of men, women and children—Dorothy Bernard, Alice Hollister, Martin Leonard, May Holting, Edith Storey, Marie Waters, Julie Rhodes, Francesa Billington, Gold Markey, Claire Anderson, Dolores Costello, May Buckley, Gladys Bond, Junnie Dalmore, Pearl Sinden, Cora Hawley, Irene Warfield, Helen Holmes, Gleg Madison, Winifred Westover?

The list of the forgotten forgotten-nots is endless.

And every day the list grows longer.

THREE IN RACE IN WISCONSIN

MILWAUKEE, (AP)—The severest contest entered in the special nominating primary September 10, in a contest for the seat in the United States senate vacant by the death of Robert M. La Follette, represent various forms and issues of Wisconsin republicanism.

Robert M. La Follette, Jr., heading the La Follette faction; Roy F. Wilcox, heading the Coolidge faction and Francis E. McGovern, heading the progressive faction opposed to the candidacy of young La Follette, have all filed on the republican ticket.

Arthur L. Barry, a republican, filing the La Follette-Wilcox ticket, made legal at the election in Wisconsin, not in use, filed under that banner, and is the only avowed wet candidate. The democratic cause passed William George Bruce, who has state central committee of the republican party has selected John W. Wagon. These were not opposed.

Some uncertainty has developed whether any of the severest primary candidates may file as an independent in the election, to be held two weeks later.

La Follette takes up the task of his father where he dropped them, according to his father. He is 21 years of age and has been 12 months for years as an actor's successor.

Mr. Wilcox was the unanimous choice of a convention called to "print the people of the state to exercise their will in selecting a candidate." He subscribes to the principles of republicanism as set forth by president Coolidge. With his supporters he look the stand that the present state administration, backing the candidacy of La Follette, in its campaign for the presidency, stole the republican party in Wisconsin for political purposes and uses.

McGovern, whose campaign in Iowa included some progressivism, was twice elected governor of the state and holds to the principles of progressivism, but is opposed to the candidacy of young La Follette. McGovern's plea is based largely on the fact that his age and experience are more in keeping with the office.

Wilcox, McGovern and Barry are lawyers. Young La Follette has spent the majority of his time since graduation from the University of Wisconsin under the eye of his father.

Mr. Bruce is the head of a large business in Milwaukee and has been prominent in civic movements for many years.

Mr. Wagon is a newspaper editorial writer on Victor Berger's publication.

Takes Blame

Mrs. Ruth Janisse, 39, of La Salle, Ont., accused jointly with her husband of having killed Clayton McMillin, 36, of Windsor, Ont., says she fired the shots and exonerates her husband. She recently was discharged from the hospital, recovering from what she says was a self-inflicted bullet wound in the leg.

Foreign Law Makers Will Meet in Senate and House Halls

WASHINGTON (AP)—Probably for the first time in history, the chambers of the senate and house of representatives will become available for the use of a body other than the American congress, when the Interparliamentary union begins a six-day meeting here on October 1. Its illustrious members of foreign parliaments over the world will join American law makers to consider international problems with the codification of international law forming the major topic of discussion.

The twenty-third conference of the Union, as it is known officially, will bring the organization to the United States for the second time. It met in 1904 at St. Louis—the only time it has assembled in the two Americas. Thirty countries are represented in the membership and the official languages of the conference will be French, German and English. If the South American representation is large, Spanish may be added as one of the official tongues. Australia and New Zealand will not send delegates, because of elections in those lands.

As the conference is coming here on the invitation of President Coolidge, on request of the senate, the chief executive will officially receive the delegates. Preliminary information indicates that there will be 300 foreign parliamentarians participating, and 65 members of the American congress.

Arriving in New York toward the end of September, a large group of the delegates expect to be granted the freedom of the port, thus waiving the usual customs examinations, as they have been advised to obtain diplomatic passports. A special train will carry them from New York to Washington, but a stop for an entertainment in honor of the visitors is being arranged at Philadelphia.

The program here embraces discussion of Pan-American problems; the development of international law; European customs understanding; reduction of armaments; dangerous drugs, and topics bearing on the parliamentary system in general. Questions local to one country are ruled out of the proceedings.

Mount Vernon, the home and tomb of George Washington, will be visited by the delegates during their stay at the capital, and the chamber of commerce of the United States will tender them a reception and luncheon. Secretary Kellogg will preside at a state dinner at the Mayflower hotel on October 6, supplementing the American government's cognizance of the visitors at the White House reception earlier in the day.

On October 8 and 9 the Carnegie endorsement for international peace will entertain the visitors in New York. In their special train the delegates will go to Niagara Falls, N. Y., for a sight-seeing tour on October 10 and 11. The Canadian group of the Union then will take over the duty of host and the delegates will visit Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec. The final sitting of the twenty-third conference of the Union will be held in the parliament buildings in Ottawa, where national minorities and dangerous drugs will be discussed. This probably will take place on October 12.

The 1924 conference of the Union was held in Bern, and in Geneva, Switzerland, where its headquarters are located. Peace by arbitration and international law is the prime object of the Union.
