Film Stars of the Past. Who Remembers Them?

Here are a few of the famous film stars of yesterday who are now almost unknown in the screen world. How many movie goers can remember them?

Origin of Japanese Race Was in North Scientist Believes

TOKYO (AP)—Dr. Iiyazu Torii, formerly of the Tokyo Imperial university and one of the foremost authorities in Japan on anthropology, is of the opinion that the Japanese race originated in the north, and not in the South Sea. Dr. Torii was quoted recently as stating that evidence indicated that the larger part of the stock from which the race developed migrated from Korea, Siberia and Manchuria.

"Evidence discovered in the study of prehistoric Japan overwhelmingly supports the theory that the larger part of the Japanese stock came from countries to the north of this island," he said. "There are some foreigners who maintain that the South Sea islands were the cradle of the Japanese race and their arguments are to some extent convincing to the amateur. It is only for foreigners to jump at this conclusion because indications supporting it are abundant. The argument falls flat, however, if the entire subject is studied on the basis of prehistoric records and a study is made of the comparative cultures of the early inhabitants of Japan and those of the northern parts of the continent."

"There were different tribes living on this island between the prehistoric and protohistoric ages who used bronze instruments. The discovery of copper drums which have been unearthed in various parts of Chugoku, Shikoku, Tokaido and Kaga are similar to those which have been found in Yunnan, Indo-China and Siam. There is a great deal of evidence pointing to Malay origin, but the overwhelming proportion of the evidence points to Korea, Manchuria and Siberia.

TOURISTS FILL HOTELS
HOOD RIVER, Ore.—All records for motor tourists were broken here when the two local commercial hotels had applications from an estimated 250 motorists for whom accommodations could not be made. The lobbies of both hostels were crowded with prospective guests. Telephone calls to the hotels revealed that hotels there were full. Mountain resorts were over-running and the Columbia Gorge hotel had a big overflow. Many motorists were placed with private families in city and valley. Others had to sleep in their cars.

The loop highway yesterday and today was crowded with traffic. In the two days it was estimated that more than 40,000 people traveled the new road.

Many Build in Mountains
SANDY, Ore.—Deputy Assessor William Morand of Hood county completed his work in this district and Morand says it is remarkable how many summer homes are being built in the mountains, and that already 150 more homes are planned for next season. Nine new private plans were assessed by Morand, and nine more are already planned for next year, beside the governmental lots on which he assesses the improvements only.

Latoria Stakes Mecca For Many Fine Racers

LATORIA, Ky. (AP)—The Latoria championship stakes, with $15,000 added, the richest feature of the fall racing season in Kentucky, is expected to bring together at the Millvale Course here in October some of the best three-year-old campaigners in the country.

The race over the mile and three-quarters route will have a gross value of approximately $40,000, of which the winner's portion will be around $20,000 and a $10,000 trophy given by the Kentucky jockey club.

There were 850 nominations the entire closed July 2, 1925; 219 made second payment and 74 third payment. With a $500 starting fee, the race will be second only to the $50,000 Kentucky derby, the richest race in the state. The exact date for the race will be determined later.

Between ten and fifteen of the more prominent runners are expected to answer the bugle call. Among the probable starters is Silver Fox, the Sincere-Coe entry, who won the Cincinnati and Empire stables, Flying Ebony, Clifford Cochran's Kentucky derby winner, and Broadway Jones, Latoria derby winner sent to the post by E. H. Bradley's Idle Hour stable, are stake winners eligible for the fall classic.

Others who may face the barrier are Sir Peter, owned by Moss Goldblatt; King Nadi, owned by J. J. Trotter; Hal Price, Hoedley's; Superior, owned by the Belair stud; Kentucky Cardinal, owned by C. Frank Groat of Chicago; Contract, who sports the colors of Walter J. Saffron, eastern turfman; Harry Payne Whitney's Courageous, and the fillies Auburn and Begonia.

Abd-El-Krim Refuses Peace

Abd-El-Krim, leader of the warring Rif in Morocco, with Don Spangola, financier, a multi-millionaire, Spanish financier, who was sent to attempt a peace settlement with the Rif tribes, 1924. The negotiations fell through and hostilities were resumed.

WOMAN BULLDOGS DEER
and holding it until help came and tied it for her.

VERONIA, Ore.—Mrs. Charles White is champion deer catcher on the coast. Within her bare hands and within the city limits of Veronia, in regular western bulldogging fashion, she grabbed and the deer was shot. It was a deer by the head, throwing it about 1 year old.

Winds of Chance
