BRADSTREETS

NEW YORK (AP) - Bradstreet's today says: Wholesale trade and industry moved forward this week, despite intense heat, drought and low streams on the wide areas of the central west and south. Buying was relatively because of these conditions, also because of a good business having been done in August and, finally, because the buying month of a large volume, much ahead of a year ago - still means to follow the line of current needs.

Features of the week have been continued reports of deterioration of corn, cotton in the west, in which latter, also, premature opening and shedding of the cotton crop is reported from west of the Mississippi river to the Atlantic coast. Sharp advances in cotton prices; the entry into the steel markets of railroad's machine rails in good quantity; downward revisions of estimates of department; increased activity in iron and steel, automobile manufacture and output of lumber, and a further slight stiffening of prices of bituminous coal, this latter accompanying increased output of the latter in central western mines, also are noted.
