U. S. FIRST IN CARELESSNESS

CLEVELAND (AP)—The opening gun in a world war against accidents on the streets, at home and in workshops will be fired on Monday morning Sept. 28, when representatives of more than 20 nations will attend the fourteenth annual Safety congress in this city, where 450 speakers will address 30 separate gatherings which will be in session until Friday, Oct. 2. America will be branded as the most careless nation in the world by speakers who will point out that the accident death rate for the United States is 75.4 fatalities for each 100,000 population, almost two and one-third times as high as the record of England and Wales, which is only 22.6 for each 100,000 population. The safest country appears to be Denmark whose rate is 20 for each 100,000. The League of Nations will be represented by Dr. Frederick Hiltzmann, of the International Labor Office of Geneva, Switzerland, who will come here especially to call about plans for accident prevention campaigns in other countries and to obtain data regarding efforts that are being made here to conserve lives and limbs and properties. What is needed in the United States to reduce the number of lives lost through accidents will be dwelt upon by Judge John Barton Payne, of the American Red Cross, whose topic will be "The Nationalization of Ideas and Ideals." How America should mobilize her peace time forces will be pointed out by Rear Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., who will speak on "Safety in the Nation." Participating in the Safety Congress will be the National Safety Council, National Civilization Rehabilitation Conference, National Organization for Public Health Nursing, American Society of Safety Engineers, and trade groups representing every industry in the country. In New Jersey, a man claims a ghost chased him. Ghosts should know better than to run in this hot weather. A perfect gentleman is one who knows exactly when to kiss a lady. "Of course she wants the real thing eventually—the grand passion—as the French call it, but until that comes, she wants to know that she has the power to make answer to her every beck and call." "And I think it is right too. Women should be loved. They should be adored by men. To a woman there is nothing more beautiful than the knowledge that a strong man adores her. I know, I am a woman." Comedy showing, "Mac's Beth."

Dick Barthelmess Stars in "Shore Leave"

"Shore Leave," the new Richard Barthelmess production which comes to the Arcade theater on Friday, was a big Broadway hit when produced by David Belasco with Frances Starr in the stellar role. As written by Hubert Osborne, "Shore Leave" centers about the character of the little dressmaker of a small New England seaport. This role, Connie Martin, was played by Miss Starr. The story dwelt with Connie's romance with a happy-go-lucky sailor, one "Billie" Smith, played behind the footlights by James Rennie. Barthelmess saw striking possibilities in the role of "Billie" Smith. The play was purchased by the producers of the Barthelmess pictures, Inspiration Pictures, Inc., and the comedy was adapted to fit the young star's needs by Josephine Lovett.

Every Woman a Vamp, Mae Busch, Screen Star, Insists

At the bottom of her heart, hidden behind centuries of suppression, every woman is an encephalotripsy, says Mae Busch, now playing in the Preferred Picture, "The Triflers" at the Sherry theater. This fascinating screen star, has played many roles, where she was the heart breaker, and her knowledge of the species is rather widespread. "In her heart of hearts," says the star, "woman craves romance. No matter where it comes from, no matter how it comes to her, her heart craves for it. She loves to have men follow her in public places, wants to think they adore her and wants the rest of the world to know it too. Above all else she wants them to make love to her."
