UNCHAPERONED DOG VENTURES INTO THE RING

Junior is a disillusioned dog. All he wanted was a bit of excitement to relieve the monotony of solitude. Whatever the condition of the other dog, Junior came out of the scrap with nothing more worrisome than a bite through his left forepaw. Even yet he cannot understand it. He licked that wound in the approved canine fashion, yet an infection set in, and he is paying for his run in shudders of pain that wrack his bristles and whitened body from his sensitive nose to the tip of his chopped-off tail.

Junior is the big bulldog belonging to the W. L. Nelson gang, 1512 Adams avenue. Some grown-ups give him a wide range when they pass him on the street, for he is a husky fellow, but the youngsters know him for the toughest dog in town. He likes to play rough, too, but his particular charm is his mistress Miss Mildred Nelson. He probably wouldn't have gone to trouble at all if she hadn't gone to feed college, at Portland, and left him to a chummy existence in La Grande.

But Junior isn't crying about it. It may be his canine pride that keeps him silent while the pain shakes him in recurring spasms of floor.

Little children look in at him through the door with misty-eyed pity.

"Junior is an awful nice dog," they sigh.

It's limping around today, and the veterinarian says he'll soon be well.

LONDON (AP)—Nordic blonde hair for millinery is higher in price than the dark tresses chosen from the heads of women of Alpine and Mediterranean stock. London hair dressers choose from $10 upward for a switch of 11, say 70 inches in length. But Nordic blonde hair comes from the heads of maidens and matrons of Scandinavia. The old-fashioned auburn hair, the plain red and jet black and the more common "dish water" colored brown hair comes a lot cheaper.

Swat-The-Fly Season Is Just Beginning

Previous Tampering Indicated In Ancient Tomb Recently Found

MOSCOW (AP)—Discoveries made by Koslov, the explorer, in the excavation of an Imperial tomb near Urga, Mongolia, has intensified the interest of archaeologists in that part of Asia. The tomb which Koslov excavated apparently had been tampered with in past centuries, but contained many interesting objects which led to the conclusion that the burial took place 2000 B. C.

Two pieces of thick carpet were ornamented with pictures of an elk, a winged lynx, a bull and a leopard. There were traces of varnish and paint on the tomb, and the interior was draped with silk, richly ornamented with the figures of winged riders and reindeer. A vase was found in a sitting posture in the corridor of the tomb and the fragments of clothing smelled strongly of camphor.
