COOS-CURRY FAIR ENDS. MARSHFIELD, Ore.—The Coos-Curry fair at Myrtle Point closed yesterday. An accident, which may prove fatal, occurred during the late hours of the exhibition, when Charles Watts, 25, was thrown by his mount, his foot catching in the stirrup and the broncho kicking him in the head and stomach.

There was a large crowd at the fair on the closing day, and the judges released the award list, which made the closing hours of unusual interest.

Mary Ellen Hartley of Broad Bent and Clarence Oskender, Coos River, won the state fair trip.

The judging team to attend the state fair is composed of Ovela Lewis, a McKinley girl, who took first prize; Helen Mast and Anna Baker of Lee.

Minstrel Show Promises Many Laughs for La Grande

Richard and Pringles Famous Minstrels a super minstrel show of forty well known musical minstrels artists have no doubt made more people laugh than any other organization of his kind as they have secured ten of the world's best minstrel comedians. They are genuine Ethiopians and their singing and dancing are such as only the real darkey is capable of. Richards and Pringles has the strongest company this season that ever appeared under that famous title, and they are doing a record breaking business at every city visited this season. The big free street parade will take place as usual at noon and a special hand concert will be given at seven-thirty. In front of the theatre, Richards and Pringles Minstrels will be at the Arcade Theatre, Mat-night on Saturday Oct. 3.

Marmont and Rubens Star in "A Woman's Faith"

Percy Marmont, in a role entirely Jewel screen play which opened yesterday in the Arcade theatre, is the medium by which two favorites rise to new screen triumphs. Percy Marmont, in a role entirely different from anything he has ever done on the screen before, gives us the best piece of work since "If Winter Comes." Alma Ribens again proves that she is one of our really great screen actresses. It is a great play done in a great manner and one that is sure to find favor with the most critical movie fan.

His latest Universal-Jewel success is a tremendously dramatic love story of a man and a woman both of whom have drunk deeply of the cup of tragedy and despair.

The man, Donovan Steele, found the woman who was to marry him in the arms of his best friend, the girl, Nerse Caron, a French-Canadian, is wrongfully accused by her uncle, Xavier Caron, of the murder of her brother.

The two, Steele and Nerse, coming from opposite corners of the North American continent, seek to hide themselves in the woods of Canada—the man, becoming a renegade, to escape mankind; the girl, to elude the police.

There in the woods begins a clash of the two powerful wills of which grows many strong and dramatic scenes. The man doubts everything and has become a scoffer of all that is good in the world. He sneers at the woman's confession of innocence. Though deep in her own misery, she seeks to raise him from the depths of despair.

Still unbelieving, Steele fights a terrific battle with Cluny, a detective who comes to arrest the girl. In the fight, Steele, though victorious, is blinded. His latest affliction makes him all the more bitter but the woman fights the harder. There finally comes the great scene of the play set in the picturesque interior of the Church of St. Anne de Beauport. There the climax is reached in a most impressive and unusual manner.

"A Woman's Faith" was directed by Edward Laemmle, who has given to it that close attention to detail that marks all his productions. The two leading players have been given a splendid supporting cast. It includes such well known favorites as Jean Harlow, Hughie Mack, Zasu Pitts, Cesare Gravina, Rose Rosanova, William H. Turner and Calvin Roberts.

By Condo "Seven Chances" At Sherrys Has 700 Brides

When it comes to money and marriage in "Seven Chances" his latest Metro-Goldwyn comedy, Buster Keaton just can't say "no." Buster starts out as a millionaire but, being of a most religious turn of mind, he sells all he has and given the proceeds to the poor. Meanwhile some 700 women in bridal regalia answer his newspaper advertisement for a wife, believing him to have $7,000,000. And there the fun begins.

David Brascov considers "Seven Chances" the funniest stage comedy of recent years. And Buster Keaton has "gagged it up" until his film version is declared to be seven times as funny as the stage comedy was. Joseph M. Schenck purchased "Seven Chances" from David Belasco and released it through Metro-Goldwyn Pictures.

Buster's new leading woman in "Seven Chances" is Ruth Dwyer, who has just finished the lead in "White Fang." Miss Dwyer has had in the past year, Natalie Talmadge Keaton, his wife, and Kathryn McGuire having played opposite to him in his previous comedies.

Buster also is supported by T. Roy Barnes, star of many Hollywood comedies and New York musical comedy successes; as well as by Sully Edwards and Jules Cowles and a bevy of seventeen beautiful "bit" stars including Lora Barr, sister of Theda Bara, Marion Harlan, daughter of Otis Harlan and Alma Bramley, Detroit heiress.

Billion Offensive Film Titles

BERLIN, (AP)—Cinema proprietors and film producers have been warned by the central committee of German Film Industries against the employment of obscene or offensive film titles. It is claimed that often such offensive designations are used for harmless films as a sensational medium for attracting a certain type of public.
