CHICAGO (AP)—Apples and potatoes are now leaders of the marketing movement on fruits and vegetables throughout the United States. The government bureau of agricultural economics reported Wednesday that in particular, movement of apples has been gaining volume rapidly, total shipments for the week being 4228 a week ago.

Big shipments of potatoes are also in progress, averaging close to 1000 carloads a day.

Notwithstanding the great and increasing supply of apples and potatoes, the tendency of the whole list of fruits and vegetables, peaches excepted, is to higher prices. The report says the change of trend may be only the usual rebound after a long drop and that it seems early for a sustained move upward. Demand has been active, both for storage and for consumers.

Most of the peach supply at present is coming from New York with values 50 cents to $1.00 less than quotations a week ago.

CITY DADS ENACT ROLE OF "JUDGES"

Crow's evidence was "hearsay evidence" asked that it be stricken from the records and that the commissioners try the case as such a "real criminal" case would be tried in the municipal court.

Attorney Cochran then, in response to inquiries from commissioners as to what was the next move, stated that the commission can consider any testimony it sees fit.

Hess again objected but was overruled.

Mrs. Nickel in Denial.

Mrs. Nickel then took the stand and issued a sweeping denial of the charges made in the complaint filed by the police chief. She said the bottles and beer left by tenants the house had been run in an orderly manner, she had never known of any intoxicated men being in her place, she allowed no drinking, did not harbor drunken men, that the whiskey glasses were in the hotel when she took charge in July and that she had removed them once from tenant's rooms and placed them in the washroom, where she said the police found them, with the empty bottles.

In answer to questions by Mr. Hess she replied that the police made no arrests when they visited her house.

Beginning on the testimony she said that she had issued empty bottles "very frequently." Later she asserted that the bottles the police found were the only ones she had found in tenant's rooms or in the rooming house. She said they weren't in use right along to her knowledge. She stated that any parties were held in the place.

The city manager tried his hand at cross examination and President A. T. Hill and City Attorney Cochran also questioned her during the evening's proceedings.

H. H. Newton Testifies.

H. H. Newton, next witness for Mrs. Nickel, said he never had seen any arrests being made or coming out of the rooming house since he had moved there; that the house was conducted in an orderly manner as far as he knew; that he saw no parties being held; and that he saw no arrests being made or coming out of the house.

Another man was then brought to the stand and just before his statement started to give his testimony, Mr. Hill indicated he had heard enough testimony. Mr. Hess replied that it was the way you feel. He is ready to quit and then announced the "judges" decision, a six and a half hour case was heard in the afternoon at the courthouse. Shortly afterwards Mr. Cochran was called upon to give his opinion. Mr. Hess changed in a moment but Mr. Cochran asserting that in the evening he had heard of Mr. Hess saying the same thing over and over.

Mr. Cochran informed the commission that the hearing should be closed at any time the commission sees fit, a man progresses accordingly.

"If there is nothing new coming up I think we've heard enough of the same thing," Mr. Hill said, looking over. "I didn't know how many more men there were back there—meaning witnesses for the defense."

Mr. Hess, in his closing argument, told the commission he believed the evidence was favorable to Mrs. Nickel and not conclusive enough to deprive her of her rights. The case was then taken under advisement.

During the hearing many items were incorporated into the minutes at Mr. Hess' demand. At a challenge from Mr. Cochran Mr. Hess wanted to know if Mr. Cochran was afraid to have the records entered into the minutes and Mr. Cochran replied "No."

Other Matters Taken Up.

Before the hearing the commission discussed the Connorsdale sewer system situation and the city manager was ordered to report next Wednesday night on the feasibility of installing a sanitary sewer in that section of the city; the north side sewer line conditions; word that

WIT, SATIRE IN PYGMALION

Delicacy and harmony with the Shavian intent, characterized the presentation of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" by the Mount Glass players last evening at the Arcade theatre. The audience was not large, but succeeded in expressing its appreciation of a superior performance.

While "Pygmalion" was advertised as "Shaw's funniest comedy," to the average playgoer, it does not conform with the meaning of fun. Wit, to be sure, and satire of the most caustic strain, but of almost pure merit, there is none. Nor did the players attempt to insert any. Their work was delightful free from artifice of the stage.

The Plot is Simple

Henry Higgins undertakes to elevate Eliza Doolittle, a flower girl member of the lowest class in England, to the social position of a duchess by six months of careful training in speech. The girl, who is bright as well as clever, feels and resents the personal power of the philologist over her, and revolts just before the end of the fourth act. The fifth act opens with the question in everyone's mind, "Will Eliza and Higgins marry?" and, Shaw-wise, drops a tantalizing curtain over the issue.

According to the added chapter in the book of the play, Eliza marries Freddy, a simple son of an impoverished family of position, realizing that she can never hope to compete with Higgins' mother in his affections.

Mr. Olsen, who directed the work, did some excellent acting in the part of Higgins, the toadying bully and boor. Miss Janet Young created the role of Eliza with artistic success. Alfred Doolittle, Eliza's father, may have been farcical, but the audience would not have missed him. Byron Foulger was the actor. "The" roles were played by Virginia Greenwell, Ethel Baker, Gean Greenwell, Joseph H. Williams, Gordon Nelson, Leora Thatcher, and Dorothy Adams.

Here's An Important Family Problem

The housewife is the business manager of an important concern. She is the mainstay of the home because she makes it -- she provides food, makes or plans most of the clothes, and operates the establishment on a basis that produces health, comfort, and economy.

It's a big job, and not the smallest of the problems she must solve is the question of meat buying.

If you are a housewife you know how important a part meat plays in the making of every menu. Good meat is a necessity in every home. It need not be expensive -- but it must be good! The health and well-being of the family, the pleasure they have in looking forward to meal time -- much of that depends on the meat you buy.

We believe we are meat experts. We devote our entire time to the job of providing GOOD MEAT at economical prices. We handle meat products exclusively and are concerned with only one job -- that of giving you complete market satisfaction. No cold storage meats are allowed in our markets.

The particular housewives of the La Grande community are our customers. August was the biggest month in our history -- a constant growth that is evidence of satisfaction given. We invite you to try our service and become acquainted with Crescent Quality.
