Film Glorifies American "Barefoot Boy"

The American girl has been glorified in song and story, on stage and screen; the chorus girl has been glorified by a man who is in the finest connoisseur of women in the world; the policeman and fireman, railroad engineer, postal employee have been glorified, but it remained for David Kirkland, idealist and dreamer, to glorify that human being who is really the foundation of our great American civilization—our boy.

Hail to you, America, "barefoot boy," for there is none finer. You smirks a tremendous stepping stone, clean places. You have built a solid foundation of health which will help you over the many hard places in your battle with the world.

Life is not easy for the "barefoot boys." They have much to contend with, but they are all fighters, and know how to win. Frankie Lee portrays the role of the "barefoot boy" in real American boy-fashion. Here is a youngster who knows the art of self-expression, and uses it to his admirable advantage. There isn't another juvenile actor on the screen today who could have done a better job. "The Barefoot Boy," a super-speed First National comedy-drama.

"Young men from nineteen to thirty seem to be just 'blah.' All they think about are flasks of whiskey or gin in the hip pocket, automobile rides and petting parties. They have nothing interesting to talk about; if they have, they don't know how to tell it. "Somehow or other, to me they seem to lack pulse. They rave about themselves, talk in the language of male flappers and are horribly boring. I simply can't stand them.

"But a man between thirty and fifty is an interesting person. He has attained pulse. He has passed his fligthy days. He is sensible, and can talk about things other than self, bootlegging and petting. He knows the world; has had experience in making his own way. He knows life, can offer suggestions and give advice. I can talk for hours with men of this age, but hate to talk five minutes with the young cubs."

It is a David Kirkland production, based on the immortal poem of the same name by John Greenleaf Whittier. Comedy showing "Great Guns"

Mary Astor Plays Male "Flappers"

Believe it or not! Mary Astor, famed screen actress, has an antipathy for young men. If you are between the ages of nineteen and thirty, although that is a fine age from a military standpoint, you haven't a chance with this beautiful young screen star. She positively will have nothing to do with men under thirty; hates to talk to them; won't have them around.

"Men have to be over thirty or I can't be bothered with them," declares Mary, who is co-featured with Hen Lyon today at the Arcade Theater in "The Pace That Thrills," a super-speed First National comedy-drama.

"Young men from nineteen to thirty seem to be just 'blah.' All they think about are flasks of whiskey or gin in the hip pocket, automobile rides and petting parties. They have nothing interesting to talk about; if they have, they don't know how to tell it. "Somehow or other, to me they seem to lack pulse. Tom Mix Stars In New Zane Grey Story

Tom Mix, according to report, has packed an unusual number of thrills into his latest William Fox starring vehicle, "The Rainbow Trail," which will be shown at the Star theater today. "The Rainbow Trail" is even more thrilling than "Riders of the Purple Sage," to which it is the sequel. Both stories are by Zane Grey, and therefore both breathe the spirit of the West.

In the beautiful, rugged, snow-capped mountains of the Northwest, Mix and Tony, his wonder horse, ride through perilous adventures. While making the picture, Mix performed deeds of new daring. The story is full of swift situations. The winsome Anne Cornwall shows marked dramatic ability in her portrayal of the leading role opposite Mr. Mix.

Several hilariously funny episodes are contributed by Mark Hamilton and Lucien Littlefield, a picturesque pair of western comedians. Harcourt, the principal villain; Diana Miller, a lesser villain; Steve Clemente, Vivian Oakland, Tom Delmar, Fred De Silva, Carol
