HEALTH POISON OAK

(By Dr. Frederick Stricker) There is one plant that heralds the approach of cooler weather quicker than all other vegetation native to the state of Oregon. The leaves of poison oak or rhus diversifolia are usually the first to change color. The poison oak plant is perhaps most frequently encountered by the unsuspecting city visitor to the country. Yet it may be distinguished easily from other plants by its shiny leaves, which are grouped in threes. Two of the leaves are opposite and short stalked, while the middle leaf is long stalked. It grows as a short shrub or small tree. Its berries are smooth and greenish, which later turn to a yellowish white. These distinguishing marks, if borne in mind, will protect the vacationist from poison oak. Poisoning usually occurs as a result of actual contact with some part of the plant. It is possible, however, that a person can be poisoned by the leaf hairs or pollen of the plant if only a short distance from it. The poison is also spread by burning the shrubs. While many people can wander at will through a growth of poison oak without danger, there are some people who are highly susceptible to the poison.

If you have come in contact with poison oak, one of the surest and best ways to prevent the eruption is to use soap and warm water, for the poison requires some time to penetrate the skin. A stiff brush should not be used as this might tend to drive the poisonous material further into the skin. Use a heavy lather and continue washing for almost four or five minutes with pledges of cloth or gauze, regarding each in turn. Change the water frequently, or use running water. Repeat the process in four or five hours.

The symptoms of poison oak are comparatively easy to recognize. A more or less mild attack may be ushered in by a burning and itching of the skin. Within 24 hours after the skin is exposed to the poison a red rash appears. This is followed by more or less swelling and itching, then small blisters filled with serum make their appearance. The irritation of the eruption may be allayed by immersing the inflamed surface in a solution of hypochlorite of soda in the proportion of two tablespoons to the quart of water. Warm solution of borax acid or common salt or baking soda may be used to relieve the irritation. Favorable reports on the use of extracts of poison oak for the prevention and treatment of this form of skin inflammation have been made by a number of physicians. A bad case of poison oak always requires the attention of a physician. In any case if the infection causes fever, pain or headache, it is much safer to call a physician.

Skyline Trail Work Rushed. SANDY, Ore.—Work on the south unit of the Skyline trail is still being rushed, with Ranger J. A. Graham in charge of 45 men, and the work will continue until snow comes. ### "Hawaiian Ukes" Made in Ohio Someone is always taking the romance out of life. Most young flappers and balloon-trousered shiks probably think that the ukulele, with its tantalizing melody, comes direct from the moonlit beach of Waikiki. Bu here's proof that it doesn't. One of the largest ukulele factories in the little unromantic town of East Sparta, O. And here are real Amer lean girls, not dusky Hawaiian belles wearing leis and short grass skirts turning out 200 ukuleles a day. Business has been rushing since college started.

SELECTS DOG TRIAL COURSE

The course has been chosen for the dog field trials which will be held here Sunday, October 11. The dogs will start on the E. O. L. and P. company's land directly east of La Grande five and one-half miles and will go toward Cove. This is a birdie country and the dogs will have a chance to do good work, it is said by Wing, Fin and Fleetfoot club members, sponsoring the trials.

Mr. Ware, who has been secured as field judge, will be here Friday, October 3, and will go over the course. The drawing of the fields will be Saturday, October 10. There will be a special meeting Wednesday, October 7, of dog owners and fanciers at the Star garage.

7 TRUE BILLS RETURNED

ASTORIA, Ore.—Seven true bills and three not true bills were returned here by the circuit court grand jury. Jalma Saari was indicted for contributing to the delinquency of a minor girl; Michael O'Keefe, 19, of Portland, on counts of larceny and burglary, and Peter Hansen on three counts of possession of morphine, still and liquor. Not true bills were returned in the cases of George Huff charged with larceny; Raymond White, charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor, and Joe Holweger, charged with a breach of morals. One secret indictment was returned. The jury contained the work and from the character of witnesses called was thought to be promising into one of the three arson cases before it.

EUGENE BOY FOUND HERO

EUGENE, Ore.—John Tomphey, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Tomphey of this city, may receive national Boy Scout honors for heroism in preventing the burning to death of Mildred Hamilton, a neighbor girl, a few days ago, according to C. R. Clark, Scout executive here. John, hearing the screams of the little girl, after her clothing had caught fire from a lighted candle while at play, ran to her assistance and taking off his sweater, wrapped her in it and rolled her on the ground, subduing the flames. His prompt action saved her life, according to physicians.

day night and sentence will be imposed Saturday. The case of Jess Saling, charged with unlawful possession of liquor, was on trial today. Trial of the case against Mrs. Peters was on appeal from the lower court, where she was sentenced to 60 days in jail and fined $250.

PETE TRINOR IS NEAR DEATH

(Continued from Page One.) tresses. Old Peter hasn't any trade; he hasn't any relatives, and he hasn't any friends. There was a sister when he left England 40 years ago, but she was older than he and must have died long ago, he believes. For a number of years Old Peter has just "knocked around," but he always knew enough to find him a good job before cold weather set in. His intentions were good this time. He had been working in a road camp and was laid off when the job was finished. He had money in his pocket and it was still September, so he thought he could afford to celebrate a while before he looked for a winter berth. Now he's afraid the jobs are all gone. But the officers at the court house and the physician whom they called in to see him last night are of the opinion that Old Peter won't need any more jobs.
