COUNTY WILL SUPPLY BREAD

herry jelly will come from Clatsop county, pears from Jackson county, and peaches from Baker county. The peaches to be sent to Corvallis come from the orchard of Mr. Baker, who lives near Home, Oregon. Union county will furnish the rolls, to be made from Hard Federation wheat flour. A sack of flour was shipped to Corvallis today by H. G. Avery, county agriculturist, to be made into rolls for the banquet.

Besides the county agent's present, representatives from the various departments of the Oregon Agricultural College will take part in the banquet. Representatives of the state press, including agricultural papers, have also been invited. The idea of the banquet is to encourage the use of home grown products. It is expected that the assembly of Oregon food products will be very attractive. The banquet will be prepared by the hotel.

Charleston Popular In Smarter Cabarets In Paris at Present

PARIS (AP)—The newest American dances, such as the Charleston and its many variations, have proved popular in the smarter cabarets and dance halls, but attempts to make them catch on with the general dancing public of Paris are not meeting with any great response.

The average Parisian finds the eccentric move of the Charleston requires too much mental application, and shows a preference for simpler steps such as the waltz, which retains most of its old-time popularity, the new Parisian tango and the fox trot and one-step. Even the dancing teachers are half-hearted concerning the complicated steps. They declare frankly that they do not think that they ever will be popular among the dancing multitudes.

Meanwhile negro revues and negro acts are drawing crowds to the music halls, and some cabarets, in an effort to show they have the real unadorned thing, advertise their negro artists as "born and bred in Charleston."

ARMY PREPARES FOR CAMPAIGN

husband, taken what money she had and gone to Baker to try to make an independent living. She looked in vain for work and, finally, when all her money was spent except the sum she had laid aside for carfare, she bought a ticket back to La Grande. But when she arrived here her husband had disappeared. That night she walked the streets. In the morning she spent her remaining coins for toast and a cup of coffee. All day long she kept up her search and when night came again she appealed for help to the Salvation Army. She was immediately given a warm supper and furnished a bed, while the envoy and his wife took up the search for the missing husband. They were able to locate him; and, after breakfast next morning, a reunion was brought about and the household restored to peace and happiness.

An ex-service man was the principal in a touching case cared for Monday. The young man had been dismissed as cured from the hospital at Walla Walla, but a few days of exposure while he looked for a job put him back where he had been weeks before. He applied to the envoy for a recommendation, and Mr. Barker discovered that the poor fellow was unfit for work or for any place but a hospital bed. So he took him in and gave him what comforts he could until the authorities could be notified and transportation to the hospital forwarded.

It is an organization that cares for situations such as these that asks a share in La Grande's generosity next week.

RESULTS OF IRRIGATION ARE VIEWED

labor were given as the reasons for this prosperity. Grover Burroughs, president, and O. C. Soots, secretary of the Yakima Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the guests and expressed the appreciation the Yakima people felt at the tribute the Union county men were paying this valley by taking their time to inspect the things which have been accomplished there. A short history of the valley was outlined by Soots telling how the last 20 years had brought prosperity to a section some 320,000 acres in extent through the intelligent use of irrigation. From the marketing of a few stringy beef cattle in 1900 to the shipping of some 50,000 ears of produce during the year 1925 was offered as proof of the value to this valley of irrigation.

From Desert to "El Dorado" H. B. Creel, secretary of the Yakima county farm bureau, explained that irrigation meant the difference between sterile desert and fertile production to this valley. That land values had risen from a worthless nothing to $1500 to $2000 an acre; although the $2000 land was unusual, admitted Mr. Creel.

Andrew Slavin, rancher, told of some of the possibilities realized by the intelligent use of water. He told of a farmer who had realized $55,000 returns from one year's effort on diversified farm land. He explained how some of the land values were arrived at: alfalfa land running about $300 an acre and orchard land going as high as $1500 per acre.

Win, McGonigal, Selah rancher, and Chester L. Miller, president of the Yakima county farm bureau, told of the history of their ranches and of the success of co-operative selling unions. McGonigal has spent 18 years in the valley bringing sagebrush land to bearing one of the most productive orchards in the community. Miller gave the history of the horticultural union, organized in 1902, and told of a yield of 700 packed boxes per acre from his 24-acre ranch.

Harry O. Jones, cashier of the Yakima National bank, and Frank H. Sharky, cashier of the First National bank, told how irrigation meant a greater feeling of security on the bank's part when lending money, told how diversified farmers rarely lost their places via the mortgage route and explained that great numbers of farmers of this valley had been able to pay up their indebtedness this last year. Banking in a district of this type is far less hazardous than that in a one-crop county depending on rains, said Jones.

Several of the Union county men spoke to the effect they appreciated the treatment and courtesy offered during their trip and marveled at the progress which had been made in this country through the medium of irrigation.

A. R. Hunter Speaks
A. R. Hunter, self styled "black dirt farmer" from the Grande Ronde country, told how he rode through this country when a boy and of the desert it was. He explained what a revelation this trip had been concerning the value of irrigation and how they were beginning to realize what it would mean to their own country.

Elmer Stoddard, lumberman of La Grande, quoted statistics which showed La Grande as gradually losing its former prestige. "Some 20 years ago," stated Stoddard, "the valley had a population of 15,000; today there are less than 9000. I don't believe our bankers can make anything like as good a statement as these Yakima men make. I've been talking irrigation and I'm going home and talk more irrigation."

Irrigation Favored
"The best men in the valley quit their business and came here to study your success," explained Dr. W. T. Phy, vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce and secretary of the agricultural committee. Dr. Phy admitted the Grande Ronde valley was a great valley; but he felt it could become a much greater place through irrigation.

This caravan was organized through the efforts of the La Grande realty board and the chamber of commerce. The idea originated with Geo. H. Cursey, president of the realty board when attending the realty board convention held in Yakima in 1924. Mr. Cursey saw the prosperity of that country through the irrigation and envisioned what it would mean to Grande Ronde men to put water into their own valley. This says Cursey is the first step toward making these visions come true.

The caravan left the Commercial hotel at 8:30 Friday morning for an inspection trip of nearby projects and about noon broke up into various units, each one viewing some part of the valley that appealed to it.

J. L. Lutz, superintendent of the United States reclamation service, joined the group at Sunnyside and took charge of the caravan from then on.
Many members of the caravan state today that the visit to the Yakima valley was an "eye-opener" as to the value of irrigation and pledge themselves to further the cause of irrigation in the Grande Ronde valley when the time for activity along that line comes.

Those who made the trip were: Dr. W. T. Phy of Hot Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Reynolds, J. P. Phy, William Miller, Lee Reynolds, E. D. Whittier, Fred Zaugg, W. C. Perkins, A. R. Hunter, E. H. DeLong, Geo. H. Cursey, G. McDonald, F. E. Epling, L. C. Wilson, W. J. Hughes, L. L. McKenna, A. T. Hill, H. A. Bodmer, Harvey Matthews, E. S. Johnson, J. D. Anson, C. J. Black, Sherwood Williams, G. H. McKensie, R. Nathaniel, R. F. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Moran, James Moss and Andrew Mullenberg, all of La Grande; B. P. Wilson of Union; A. H. Parsons of Elgin and W. E. Buckman of Allee.
